Disease deaths, new cases on the increase

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP)— Researchers say they don't know when they will be able to identify the mystery "legionnaire's disease" that has claimed 21 lives in Pennsylvania and sent more than 140 people to the hospital in three states.

There were no signs the outbreak was abating, and officials planned a statewide check of Pennsylvania hospitals today for a more accurate picture of the situtation.

"The disease has not leveled off," state Health Secretarty Leonard Bachman said Tuesday. "Apparently both the number of deaths and the number of new cases have increased and are increasing."

More than 1,000 federal and state medical researchers have been mobilized to identify the disease. At the federal Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, researchers planned today to examine the first cultures grown from tissue samples taken from victims of the illness.

The cultures could provide a clue. "We are ruling out nothing," said Dr. Walter Dowdle, director of virology at the center. "This could be anything from an infectious disease to a toxin."

All of the known victims of the disease — including two hospitalized in New Jersey and one in New York — attended or were in some way connected with a state American Legion convention in Philadelphia that ended 11 days ago.

It was earlier reported a Connecticut man also had the disease, but Connecticut health officials later said he does not have it.

The 21st victim, James Sykes, 79, of Pittsburgh, died early today at Presbyterian Hospital in Pittsburgh. Hospital officials said he had attended the convention and showed the same symptoms as other victims.

There has been no confirmed evidence of secondary spread of the disease, Bachman said, but he added that it was still too early to discount the possibility that the disease may be spread to others.

In Philadelphia, meanwhile, representatives of the 41st International Eucharistic Conference, a week-long gathering expected to attract one million Catholics from around the world, said they planned no changes in any activities. No one attending the conference has become ill with symptoms resembling the unknown disease, officials said.

And at the White House, a spokesman said President Ford still planned to attend the conference on Sunday. White House physician Dr. William Lukash said, "I have no reservations about his going."

Also in Washington, Sen. Robert Taft Jr., R-Ohio, called for immediate congressional hearings into the Legion deaths. Taft is a member of the Senate subcommittee on health.

As the deaths and hospitalizations mounted, health experts continued their efforts to determine what the disease is and how it is transmitted.

Bachman said food and drink are unlikely possibilities. The Legion convention was headquartered at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel. But conventioneers also stayed at five other hotels.

Chino gang member taken into custody as he gets off bus

By TONY AULT
PB Staff Writer

A 23-year-old member of the Chino Sinners gang was arrested early this morning as he stepped off a Greyhound bus in Los Angeles and was accused of the slaying of two members of Our Lady of Guadalupe Church in Chino on May 17.

Gilbert Cordero, 23, of Chino was met by Chino Police Officer Don Hartley, Los Angeles Police Investigator Jack Jung and other officers as he stepped off the bus at the downtown Los Angeles bus terminal about 2:30 a.m.

Cordero was coming into the bus station from Northern California. The arresting officers said he was informed he was under arrest for two counts of murder, told of his rights and quickly whisked off to San Bernardino County Jail for booking. He was booked without bail, pending an arraignment in Municipal Court.

Chino Police Chief Jerry Doyle said the arrest of Cordero was the result of "an intensive and exhaustive investigation that took our officers into Mexico and up to Northern California."

He said "it was amazing where the leads in the case have led us."

Cordero, according to Doyle, had been a suspect in the slayings since May.

On May 17, Mrs. Manuela Cortez, 29, and Ignacio Cortez, 43, were walking the church grounds with several other members of the church parish council on an antivandalism patrol when numerous shots rang out of the darkness. Mr. Cortez, standing and talking to other members of the church council, and Mrs. Padilla, sitting in a chair talking to her husband, fell to the ground mortally wounded.

Several men were seen running from the area moments after the shooting.

In the next two months police stepped up their patrols of the barrio area, and began arresting numerous youths, many members of the Chino Sinners gang, for various violations ranging from curfew to possession of narcotics.

In the next two weeks nearly 40 persons were arrested in the barrio, one of those being Cordero.

Chief Doyle said that Cordero left Chino shortly after the slayings and wound up in Northern California. Doyle would not discuss how the investigation led to Cordero saying, "we cannot discuss how the arrest came about because of the court evidentiary rules."

Doyle did say this morning that investigators still maintain that the shootings "were definitely some type of conspiracy."

Early in the investigation Doyle said the slayings may have been the result of the church antivandalism patrols that had reduced the drug trafficking church authorities claimed existed on the church grounds. Doyle said that the slayings may have been committed by members of the youth gang or others who were familiar with the gang.

Despite the slayings and continuing threats on the lives of church members the parish council continued its antivandalism patrols backed by police officers, who, according to Doyle, were made "highly visable in the bario area.

Doyle said of the two-month investigation that his officers had been to Mexico tracking down leads and, with the help of Mexican police authorities, traced Cordero to Northern California.

He would not explain the details of the investigation in Mexico or Northern California. "The investigation is still continuing," said Doyle.

Cordero most likely will be arraigned on the charges this week in Chino Municipal Court unless the district attorney's office decides to ask for a grand jury indictment.

Doyle said it would be up to the district attorney's office as to the disposition of Cordero.

Demo congressman, family die in air crash

Wins election, but loses life

CHILLICOTHE, Mo. (AP) — Rep. Jerry Litton, his wife and two children and two other persons were killed when their small plane crashed as they headed toward a celebration of his victory in Missouri's Democratic senatorial primary.

Livingston County Sheriff Kelsey Reeter said the plane had apparently just taken off from Chillicothe airport Tuesday night bound for Kansas City and was banking for a turn when it nosedived about 75 feet north of U.S. 36. The wheels of the plane caught on a barbed wire fence and the aircraft burst into flames on impact.

Litton, 39, was killed outright, as was his wife, Sharon, 38; their two children, son Scott, 12, daughter Linda, 13; and pilot Paul Rupp Jr. and his son, Paul Rupp III.

A few hours after the tragedy, Litton was declared winner of the election for a Democratic nominee to replace Sen. Stuart Symington, who is retiring.

With 76 per cent of the vote counted, Litton had 291,908 votes, or 45 per cent, to 165,866, or 27 per cent, for former Gov. Warren Hearnes and 157,754, or 25 per cent for Rep. James Symington, the senator's son.

Late into the night, residents were sitting on the hoods of their cars around the courthouse in Chillicothe, many crying.

Reeter said he would order an autopsy on Rupp.

The Missouri Democratic State Committee announced it would meet to choose a replacement for Litton from among the other candidates, including James Symington and Hearnes.

Symington said he and his family were "stunned beyond words by this tragic news. It is unbelievable. It is horrifying."

Litton, a millionaire farmer and businessman who was born in a three-room house near Lock Springs, Mo., recently told an interviewer he had originally had three goals in life:

"I wanted to have the finest purebred cattle operation in the world; I wanted to make a million dollars; and I wanted to be elected to the United States House of Representatives by the time I was 35 or so."

First elected to Congress in 1972, Litton was considered a moderate. Both the Americans for Democratic Action and the Committee on Political Education of the AFL-CIO ranked him about middle of the road.

He had watched the early election returns at his Chillicothe home before heading for the airport.

Clerical error caused death in transfusion

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The death of Taft Schreiber, a director of MCA, Inc., who died after transfusions of the wrong type blood, was caused by clerical error, a UCLA Hospital official reports.

Dr. George S. Smith, director of clinical laboratories at the hospital, said Tuesday a technician in a blood bank, who was typing two blood samples at the same time, wrote the wrong type on Schreiber's chart.

The medical examiner-coroner has issed a report stating that Schreiber's death was brought about by several reactions, including hemorrhaging, due to the mistaken transfusions.

The 68-year-old Schreiber was admitted to the hospital on June 3 for urologic surgery. He died June 14.

"The technical work was accurate," Smith said in an interview.

L.A. wants to end special lane

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Diamonds are forever, but the City Council is hoping the same is not true of the commuter Diamond Lane project on the Santa Monica Freeway.

The council—on a 10-4 vote— asked the state Department of Transportation Tuesday to end the project that has restricted the usage of one lane during rush hour to car pools and buses since March.

Councilman Marvin Braude, author of the recommendation, said the Diamond Lanes waste time and energy and have resulted in an increase in traffic accidents.

"It is clear that the disadvantages of the lane and public risk are not worth the advantages," he said. "The public doesn't want it. There is no justification for the project."

Automakers face antitrust action as probe underway

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government regulators are going to scrutinize the auto industry's economic structure in what may be the first skirmish in an antitrust battle against the U.S. auto giants, General Motors, Ford and Chrysler.

The Federal Trade Commission announced Tuesday that it is proceeding with a full-scale investigation that its staff called for last November. The agency said it has cleared the action with the Justice Department.

The investigation itself is expected to be time-consuming, and if the government finally decides to file antitrust charges, a court battle is certain to stretch on for years.

The Justice Department will not be directly involved in the investigation, but if the FTC develops a criminal case against the auto makers, Justice Department officials will move in. The FTC is empowered to bring only civil cases.

In Detroit, the auto makers denounced the latest government action, which climaxes sporadic federal attempts over the years to challenge the bigness of the "Big Three"

Ford President Lee A. Iacocca called the FTC decision "unfortunate and unnecessary."

The Justice Department itself was on the verge of launching a major antitrust action against GM in 1968, but it dropped the suit because of a lack of support from the incoming Nixon administration.

The Justice Department is already waging protracted antitrust battles against two other titans of American industry, IBM and American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

The FTC announcement came on the heels of an FTC judge's rejection on Monday of a saff recommendation to force AT&T to divest itself of its manufacturing subsidiary, Western Electric.

The FTC announcement stressed that "the existence of an investigation does not imply that violations of law have occurred."

General Motors, which employs more than 750,000 persons worldwide and had sales of $32 billion in 1974, announced last week that in the second quarter of this year it had record net earnings of $909 million.

While GM has withstood some government challenges in the past quarter century, it has also lost some battles.

In 1957 the Supreme Court ordered chemical giant E.I. du Pont de Nemours Co. to sell its 23 per cent holding in GM stock. The case, begun in 1949, was considered one of the biggest antitrust crackdowns in U.S. history.

In 1956 the government accused GM of monopolizing the bus market, and 10 years later GM signed a consent decree in which it agreed to make its bus parts available to other manufacturers.

In 1973 the government accused GM and Ford of conspiring to monopolize fleet sales of automobiles, but both firms were acquitted.

Woman, 76, slain at family crypt

COMPTON (AP)—A 76-year-old South San Gabriel woman who visited the crypts of her late husband, daughter and son-in-law was bludgeoned and strangled to death, police say.

Martha Eddington's body was found in the mortuary after an anonymous telephone tip, a Compton police spokesman said.

She had gone to the private alcove off a corridor in the two-story indoor mausoleum on Sunday.

Move to sell governor's mansion fails

SACRAMENTO (AP) — An attempt to put the vacant $1.3-million governor's mansion up for sale has stalled in an Assembly committee, but its author says he will try for passage again next week.

The bill by Sen. Alfred Alquist, D-San Jose, was blocked Tuesday on a 4-3 vote of the Assembly Governmental Organization Committee, one vote short of passage.

The mansion, a project of former Gov. Ronald Reagan, sits unoccupied on a bluff above the American River about 14 miles east of downtown Sacramento.

It has been a problem for the state ever since Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. called it a "Taj Mahal" and refused to live in it.

Before the vote on the Senate-passed bill, Alquist amended it so that the mansion and its 11-acre site could be sold or exchanged. He said Sacramento County might be interested in such a deal.

One of the "no" votes came from committee chairman Bob Wilson, D-La Mesa, who said he did not think the state could recover anywhere near the amount it put into the mansion.

Wilson also referred to the fact that several of Reagan's friends had bought the site for the governor's mansion and given it to the state. Wilson said any sale would likely prompt a lawsuit.

"I don't think it sells for anywhere near what the state put into it," Wilson told Alquist. He said the home had no landscaping, drapes, carpets, fancy molding or ornate light fixtures.

"And it kind of looks like a Safeway store from the front," Wilson said.

Alquist said due to the annual $85,000 mansion maintenance cost "I think the state would be money ahead if we gave it away." He added the state probably could break about even on the deal.

An attempt pushed by Assemblyman Mike Cullen, D-Long Beach, to use the mansion for a convention center for state employes was killed before the final vote.

Father of 9 draws jail term in melee

Three men, including a father of nine children who reportedly injured three police officers in their attempts to avoid arrest last October were sentenced to jail terms Tuesday by Pomona Municipal Judge Robert Gustaveson.

Gustaveson said he was levying the maximum sentence of one year in jail for assault with a deadly weapon and another six months for interfering with a police officer against Joe V. Haro, 43, of 2318 S. San Antonio Ave.

The judge said his sentence was based on his observation that Haro, the father of nine, showed no remorse over the fact that he nearly killed officer Greg Goodwin when he struck the policeman with a baseball bat.

Hero's son-in-law, Able J. Estrada, 21,was given 90 days and placed on three years of probation on a battery charge.

Juan J. Nunez, 27, was sentenced to 15 days in jail and placed on three years of probation for battery. He was also fined $250.

Haro and Estrada immediately gave notice they would appeal the verdicts and the sentences to Superior Court.

The sentences were handed down after a lengthy trial that lasted from May 19 to July 22.

The disturbance came after a barbecue at Haro's house last Oct. 19. Police were called by a neighbor who had complained that someone at the barbecue had tossed an empty can onto his yard.

When police officers Peter Amato and Vic Mancini arrived to investigate the complaint, they found Haro, Estrada and Nunez belligerent.

They claimed that when they sought admission into Haro's home the three men and other party guests began throwing dishes and other household items at them, and that they were struck with a baseball bat and a lamp. They called for help and 20 more officers, including Goodwin, joined the melee.

Haro, Nunoz and Estrada charged police brutality contending that the officers had "beaten up" some of the guests and had used unnecessary force.

But the jury sided against the defendants and found them all guilty after a six-week trial.

Hearing set on Chaffey Dist. budget

A public hearing on the proposed $25.8 million general fund budget for 1976-77 will be conducted by Chaffey school board Thursday.

The meeting will be held in the board room of the Allan G. Smith Educational Services Center at 7 p.m.

Assistant Supt. of Business Russell I. Dickinson will present the budget document which calls for about a 2 1/3-cent increase in the district's total tax rate, from $2.5621 up to $2.5855 per $100 of assessed valuation.

It reflects income to the district during 1976-77 of $22.3 million, expenditures of $22.2 million and reserves of $3.6 million.

It is $1.8 million larger than the actual 1975-76 budget of $24 million. Of that amount, $3.4 million was in reserve accounts. In 1974-75, the district spent $19.6 million and held $2.5 million in reserves for a budget of $22.2 million.

Preliminary plans and cost estimates for classroom additions to the Chaffey Training Center will be presented for board consideration. Administrators will ask authority to apply for state aide to pay costs of the construction.

The board will conduct a public hearing on costs to taxpayers of enrolling out-of-district students.

A contract may be awarded for the South Hall building project.

Two new principals named in Pomona

Three administrators were hired Tuesday night by the Pomona school board — a high school principal, an elementary school principal and a coordinator of guidance services.

By unanimous board action, Edward F. Walsh, 33, a secondary principal in Inglewood, was hired as principal of Pomona High School succeeding Joe Andrews, who has taken a school administrative post in Newhall.

Erma L. Walks, assistant principal at Arroyo Elementary School since 1974, was hired as principal at Harrison Elementary School, succeeding Lorin Anderson who was reassigned as principal at Westmont Elementary School.

As the district's first coordinator of guidance services, the board hired Telford I. Moore, 32, a school psychologist in Riverside since 1969.

Walsh, who began his teaching career in Los Angeles in 1966, taught in Placentia and also served there as an administrative assistant, before going to Inglewood schools in 1971. He holds a B.A. degree from Loyola University and an M.S. degree from Cal State Fullerton. He holds both standard secondary and standard supervision credentials.

His salary for the 220-working-day position at Pomona High will be $29,852 a year plus mileage.

Mrs. Walks, 44, wife of the Rev. Ivan Walks of Pomona, began her teaching career in 1952 in Georgetown in her native country of Guyana. She joined the Pomona district in 1970 as a teacher at Madison Elementary School. She taught a year at Simons Junior High School before moving over to Arroyo.

She holds a B.A. degree from USC and an M.A. degree from Claremont Graduate School.

Her salary for 215 working days will be $26,941 a year.

She has standard elementary life and standard administrative credentials. She is the mother of five children.

Moore began his career as a secondary teacher in Anaheim in 1965. He went into counseling in Anaheim in 1967. He has an A.B. degree from Washington University, an M.A. degree from Cal State Fullerton, a Ph.D. from USC and an M.A. from UC Riverside. He holds six credentials, Standard Elementary, Standard Secondary, Standard Designated Services-Pupil Personnel, Standard Supervision, Ryan Administrative Services and Junior College.

Moore will be paid $26,496 for 220 working days, plus $40 a month mileage.

15-cent drop in rate

L.A. mayor proposes cut in property tax

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mayor Tom Bradley says he will ask the city council to apply $14.3 million in unanticipated revenues to property tax relief for the city's hard-pressed homeowners.

Announcing the potential property tax cut, Bradley told a news conference Tuesday: "I don't know of any major city in the country that has been able to achieve that kind of record.

"I think this brighter financial picture will be welcome relief to the city's taxpayers. It's further proof that Los Angeles is one city where we've been able to not only hold the line, but actually to cut taxes by being prudent in money matters."

The extra funds, that Bradley said were due in part to increased consumer spending, turned up in the city's reserve funds.

Bradley said the unexpected funds would mean a reduction of 15 cents per $100 of assessed valuation. That would be in addition to a 14-cent reduction made possible by a recent increase in assessments that already has taxpayers protesting and appealing their valuations in record numbers.

Crime patrol calls meeting

Pomona Base of the California Community Alert Patrol (C-CAP) will conduct a public meeting tonight at 7:30 in the Education Center auditorium, 800 S. Garey Ave.

New base commander Jack Botkin issued a special invitation to black and Mexican-American residents of the community to attend, and to citizen-band radio enthusiasts.

Botkin said that during July, C-CAP volunteers in Pomona put in 418 hours assisting both Police and Fire departments and citizens.

Landslide kills 7

TOKYO (AP) — Bulldozers flattening hills for a new golf course touched off a landslide that killed at least seven workers near Tokyo today, police said. Five others were missing.

Adult school funds axed

School tax rate falls by 5 cents in Walnut

Lopping funds for an adult school program off its 1976-77 budget, the Walnut school board has cut the district tax rate by a fraction over five cents.

The actual rate is set each year by the county but Ray McMullen, assistant superintendent, said a close estimate is $5.80 per $100 assessed valuation.

Last year's rate was $5.6346.

The decision to cut the adult school program leaves in limbo the future of approximately 80 adult school students who ordinarily would attend classes conducted in cooperation of Rowland Unified School District.

A change in state legislation would have required the Walnut district to come up with $27,000 of the $74,000 adult school cost. The total cost previously was assumed by the state.

The decision to exclude the $74,000 from the budget may mean that adult students will have to look toward Mt. San Antonio College for their instruction.

Failure of state school bonds to pass last June also affected district plans. Administrators planned to use state funds to add two portable classrooms to Walnut High School.

They're planning to add the portables anyway by using school bond money on the assumption that it will be reimbursed under the state's new priority point system based on need.

The new budget figure is $15,236,190. It is based on an assessed valuation of property within the district at $65,128,306, an increase of 11.9 per cent over last year's figure.

Energy-saving incentive in tax bill

Senate wants to pay $225 for insulating homes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate wants the federal government to pay you up to $225 to improve the insulation in your home.

Under an amendment approved by the Senate on Tuesday night, the government would pay 30 per cent of the first $750 in costs for buying and installing insulation, storm windows and doors, caulking and weatherstripping.

The plan is one of a number of amendments to an omnibus tax bill and goes under the heading of an energy saving incentive.

A separate provision added to the tax bill would allow some homeowners to cut their taxes by up to $1,000 by installing a heat pump.

Still to be considered by the Senate is a third plan that could result in a tax credit of up to $2,000 for homeowners installing a heating system run by solar energy or by the earth's natural heat.

In all cases, the government assistance would be in the form of tax credits. This means a homeowner who qualified would simply calculate his regular taxes and then cut them by the proper amount.

The three provisions are written to ensure that even the poorest homeowner is able to benefit if he improves his home in order to conserve energy.

Thus, if a person's income was so low that he owed no tax, the U.S. Treasury could end up sending him a check. For example, a person who qualified for the maximum $225 insulation credit but owed only $100 in tax would receive a $125 payment from the government. If he owed no tax, he would get $225.

Credits for heat pumps and home insulation would be available only for home improvements begun between July 1, 1976, and Dec. 31, 1978.

Scientists estimate that a heat pump, which extracts heat from the outside air, is 30 per cent more efficient in heating a home than is the usual type of electrical heater.

The only homeowners qualifying for the heat-pump credit would be those whose homes now are heated by electricity.

The home-insulation and heat-pump credits are part of a Senate-approved energy conservation tax package that would cost at least $1.2 billion over the next 10 years. The most expensive part is the $784-million estimate for the insulation credit.

Although the tax bill approved by the House last year does not contain the energy conservation provisions, other House-passed bills carry part of the package, including tax credits for home insulation.

Other parts of the package approved by the Senate on Tuesday would:

—Allow businesses to reduce their taxes by $52 million in 1977 and 1978 by improving the insulation in their buildings.

—Allow a 20 per cent tax credit for businesses that install a solar or geothermal heating system.

—Provide a 12 per-cent credit for firms that purchase equipment for using waste as an energy source, for developing shale oil or for deep-mining of coal.

—Give special tax reductions to firms involved in the development of geothermal steam as an energy source. These companies would get a 22 per cent depletion allowance as well as fast write-off of intangible drilling expenses, such as labor and supplies.

Police in S. Africa fire on blacks; 3 reported killed

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police opened fire on some 20,000 black demonstrators in Soweto township today and witnesses said at least three persons were killed and 18 others injured.

But police denied anyone was killed in the clash and said about 12 people were injured. They claimed the segregated black township was calm and under control.

The witnesses included a black journalist who said he was carrying one of the victims to a hospital when he died.

It was the first major outbreak of violence in Soweto since a student demonstration on June 16 touched off an upheaval in black townships around Johannesburg and Pretoria in which at least 176 persons were killed and more than 1,100 injured. All but two of the dead and most of the injured were black.

Witnesses reported the township, home to more than one million blacks, was in chaos today as roving mobs set fire to shops and cars. A key railway signal block was burned. Commuter trains were halted.

Heavily armed police were reported touring the township, eight miles south of Johannesburg, in armored personnel carriers and dispersing crowds with tear gas. Police sealed off all exits with roadblocks.

The largest confrontation was in northeastern Soweto, where an estimated 20,000 blacks, apparently trying to march on Johannesburg, were turned back by police. The marchers were protesting the detention of student leaders and other grievances of South Africa's black majority.

The protesters twice broke through a police barricade heading for the New Canada railway junction on the outskirts of Soweto before being stopped and dispersed with tear gas.

Police officials said they were trying to avoid shooting whenever possible in quelling the disturbances.

Gen. Gert Prinsloo, the police commissioner, said he had no knowledge of any deaths in Soweto.

"The position is that throughout the day there have been marches with posters being brandished and slogans shouted by youthful blacks.

"They are still in groups in various places in Soweto and at New Canada and Noordgesig. The situation is still strained but in general the situation is under control," Prinsloo said.

Placards carried by students read, "Release our brothers," and "We are born free but everywhere we are in chains."

Police efforts to control the rioters were handicapped by a strong wind that blew tear gas back toward police lines.

Newsmen at the outskirts of the township said police had taken stringent measures to keep journalists and photographers out of the strife-torn township. There were several reports of photographers having their cameras confiscated and film destroyed.

$5.5 million project OKd for Chino

By JON MORRIS
PB Staff Writer

A $5.5 million redevelopment project that would provide Chino with a major commercial area at Central Avenue and the Pomona Freeway was given the go-ahead Tuesday night.

The Chino City Council agreed with initial plot plans for the first two phases of the project that would require $300,000 to $500,000 to be spent by the Redevelopment Agency for land and improvements. The area would be developed by Business Properties, in conjunction with Coldwell Banker Inc.

City Council members act as the Redevelopment Agency. In that role they verbally agreed to grant Business Properties the exclusive right to negotiate for land in the project area for six months. Staff members will draw up a document for ratification at the next agency meeting.

The project eventually will include four phases on the east side of Central between the freeway and Walnut Avenue, and between Central and Vernon Avenue.

First phase of the 15-acre project calls for a market, a drug store and about 50,000 square feet of other commercial shops. Building pads along the Central Avenue frontage are set aside for banks, restaurants and other uses. Developers have said gas stations, and fast food restaurants would be discouraged from locating there.

The second phase will include the obvious plum — a junior department store close to the freeway.

Building would begin as soon as possible on phase one, and agency officials say the department store would be constructed within three years.

Development of the first two phases would encourage phases three and four, officials indicated. Chino General Hospital, located on the south side of Walnut east of Central "would attract other retail commercial and office developments" for the latter two phases.

Phase three shows a recreational building for bowling or skating, and a four-screen movie theater. Phase four indicates mainly business offices and a restaurant. A discount department store also is projected within phases three and four.

Gale Carr, former executive director of the agency, made the presentation to members Tuesday. He noted the developer would loan the agency $300,000 to $500,000 for its participation, to be paid back through tax increments resulting from the project.

Carr said $100,000 to $150,000 in property taxes per year to the city would result from the project. Also, $140,000 in new sales tax revenue is expected. He noted, however, that these are "ball park figures" and further details will be available later.

Developers need six months to negotiate for prospective tenants of the new commercial center. Business Properties will submit a report in three months on negotiations and more precise tax dollar figures. The agency then would make a final decision on feasibility of the project.

If the agency does not become involved, the area "would develop much the same way as similar properties in other cities, resulting in "picture frame development," Carr warned. Street frontage would be developed, "landlocking remaining acreage."

Carr said the agency could turn down the project and hope to encourage a regional shopping center in Chino. But he said such a center is "not likely in the forseeable future.

NO CELEBRATION NOW

FPC wants lid on rate hikes lifted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Power Commission wants a federal appeals court to lift immediately its lid on a $1.5 billion-a-year natural gas rate increase.

The FPC, in a brief submitted to the U.S. Court of Appeals on Tuesday, argued that losses to natural gas producers could be significant if the FPC rate hike is not allowed to go into effect. The FPC also opposed a court review of the rate hike.

The appeals court, acting on a challenge by 16 groups, temporarily blocked the increase on July 28, the day after the FPC authorized it.

The court will hear oral arguments on the delay Thursday.

The rate hike would boost consumers' gas bills almost immediately, with increases averaging 4 to 8 per cent over the next year, the FPC said. The impact would vary according to the amount of gas used and the location. In Florida, the FPC estimates, the average gas bill would increase only $5.20 a year, while in Ohio it could go up by $23.14.

The anti-rate hike coalition includes consumer, labor and farm groups, state officials and mayors. It charged that the hike is not in the public interest.

The FPC countered: "The Supreme Court has recognized that the public interest embraces adequate supply as well as the lowest reasonable price .... It is in the public interest to take adequate steps to maintain and if possible, increase the interstate supply of natural gas so as to lessen the dependence on much higher priced alternative sources."

The FPC disputed the coalition's claim that the increase would cost consumers at least $367 million if allowed to stand while the court review proceeds. The FPC said $120 million was "a more realistic estimate" of its cost over the next 60 days.

DRAMATIC RESCUE

Gaming group asks state licenses for private gamblers

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — Nevada gaming authorities want the state Supreme Court to block a lower court ruling that private gambling, no matter how high the stakes, is legal and requires no license.

Bud Hicks, legal counsel for the state Gaming Control Board, argued Tuesday that the ruling which favored a mystery man known only as "John Doe" could stop prosecution of illegal bookies.

But Kermit Waters, lawyer for "John Doe," said Nevada law states no license is needed for gamblers who don't hold themselves out to the public as being in the business of gaming.

At issue is an injunction granted July 20 by Clark County District Court Judge James Brennan. The injunction favored "John Doe" who has allegedly been placing and accepting bets in excess of $1 million a week.

Published reports have stated that the "John Doe" case could be a defense ploy to forestall federal prosecution of persons involved in alleged illegal bookmaking activities.

One federal tactic used in prosecuting alleged illegal bookies is to first determine that the activity is illegal in states where it occurred.

Waters is also one of a group of lawyers representing Maurice Dodson of Las Vegas, one of six persons served with search warrants in an FBI raid of a Las Vegas casino and several residences last November.

The FBI claimed the raid broke up a major nationwide illegal bookmaking ring. But no indictments have been returned in the case. Dodson has since attempted to get back about $150,000 seized in the raid.

Others presented with search warrants in the raid were former Dunes employes Michael Canon and Irwin Gordon, restaurant owner Joseph Berent, Raymond Vara and former Dunes interest holder Sid Wyman.

Waters declined to name his client. He told the Supreme Court that naming "John Doe" could expose him to investigation, arrest and "the whole nine yards a criminal defendant goes through."

Clean Air Act debate continues

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is continuing debate on amendments to the Clean Air Act of 1970 after approving new standards to prevent deterioration of clean air areas.

The House, at the same time, is taking up its own version of broadened air pollution controls.

Carter leaves farm to slash at Ford's leadership

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although the official start of his campaign is a month away, Jimmy Carter emerged from his Georgia farm to make a slashing attack against President Ford, criticizing Ford 's leadership and labeling the Republicans "a party of backwardness."

Carter also predicted the Republicans soon will launch "vicious personal attacks" against him.

The Democratic presidential nominee was in Washington today to confer with Democratic National Committee officials and to speak at a dinner sponsored by the Democratic Study Group, an organization of liberal Democratic congressmen.

Carter assumes Ford will be his opponent in the fall campaign, and his criticism of the President at a shopping center rally Tuesday in Manchester, N.H., was among the strongest he's voiced.

The former Georgia governor called Ford's fight for delegates against Ronald Reagan "an almost unbelievable spectacle."

"The President of the United States is deeply concerned about an ex-movie actor, traveling all over the nation to get a handful of delegates ... but neglecting the basic responsibilities of leadership," Carter said.

He attacked the Ford and Nixon administrations as governments of "vetoes and not visions," "scandals and not stability or pride," "rhetoric and not reason."

"The lack of leadership is the biggest single handicap the Republican party will face this year," he said.

In asserting "backwardness" of Republicans, he said the GOP has not changed in any real degree since Thomas E. Dewey lost the 1948 election to President Harry S Truman. Carter said he does not intend to become the Dewey of the 1976 campaign.

Later, at a reception for the New Hampshire State Democratic Committee, Carter predicted that after their convention, the Republicans will launch "almost unprecedented vicious personal attacks" against him, his running mate Sen. Walter Mondale and other Democratic candidates.

He asserted that such attacks will come from Republican desperation, which he said partly stems from "their very low showing in the polls and divisions within the party."

"We're now enjoying the glow and euphoria of the successful aftermath of a tremendous campaign, but we've got a tough election ahead of us," he warned the New Hampshire Democrats.

Report asks end to L.A. prepaid health program

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A legislative subcommittee is calling for the termination of a Los Angeles-area prepaid health plan whose marketing executive is the husband of Congresswoman Yvonne Brathwaite-Burke.

The Special Assembly Subcommittee on Health Care Investigations is also requesting a "housecleaning" among state Health Department employes who handle prepaid health plans.

The recommendations are in a report released Tuesday. The report had been given to Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. late Monday.

The husband of Rep. Brathwaite-Burke, D-Los Angeles, is William Burke. He has worked to help the firm, Hawthorne-based Omni-Rx Health Care, Inc., qualify for a federal grant.

Burke's dealings were the focus of two days of hearings last month by the subcommittee, chaired by Assemblyman Barry Keene, D-Eureka.

The report said, "We are troubled over the propriety of an individual with Burke's extensive political connections being involved in the delivery of those health care services financed exclusively with taxpayer dollars."

The report also recommended banning members of Congress or their families from having financial interests in health plans.

A spokesman for Brown said the governor "believes the hearings raised serious questions about the continued viability of prepaid health plans."

The plans receive flat monthly fees from the state for providing care for needy persons. Omni-Rx covers nearly 12,000 persons.

The report said Omni-Rx provided poor care, was shaky financially, used illegal subcontracting methods, and had defied state attempts at a full audit.

A company official has disputed the claims.

Among those in the Health Department recommended for dismissal is Victor Boisseree, the top official for prepaid health plans.

The report said Boisseree "repeatedly buckled under pressure from aggressive profit-motive contractors rather than risk unpleasantness."

Others recommended for firings:

—Dr. Raymond Goodman, chief of the quality evaluation unit, who issued a report saying Omni-Rx was providing adequate care.

—Robert Ledbetter, chief of the compliance section, who the subcommittee said deliberately scaled down an audit of Omni-Rx.

—Evelio Ruiz, contract manager for Omni-Rx who the report accused of knowing that a health plan pharmacist had been convicted of selling opium, but took no action.

—James Harrell, chief of the financial audit unit who testified that before he left the Omni-Rx audit, he talked with a company official about getting a job through the firm.

Reprimands and transfers were recommended for auditors James Underwood and Charles Milton.

18,000 N.Y. workers strike at 16 hospitals

NEW YORK (AP) — New York City's 16 municipal hospitals were hit by a walkout of 18,000 nonprofessional employes today in a union protest against layoffs.

It was the first strike ever against the hospitals and the city's second hospital strike within a month.

As a 12:01 a.m. union deadline for meeting its demands against layoffs passed, members of Local 420 of District Council 37, State, County and Municipal Employes Union set up picket lines around the hospitals. There were some reports of minor, sporadic violence.

The employes work as nurses aides, dietary employes, technicians, elevator operators, ambulance attendants and housekeeping personnel.

Workers were to leave jobs on staggered shifts through the night, with the full impact of the walkout expected to be felt at the start of the day shifts. However, nearly all the hospitals reported that workers had walked out at midnight or had failed to report.

Some 9,000 persons are bed patients in the municipal hospitals. But a cutback already under way in nonessential services, plus planned transfers to private hospitals and limited admissions were expected to avert any health crisis.

On a normal day the municipal hospitals handle more than 10,000 bed patients, 4,000 emergency room visits and 20,000 outpatient visits.

State Supreme Court Justice George Postel signed a no-strike order during the day, but a union spokesman said later that such orders "traditionally have not meant much" in stopping strikes.

"We will not obey any order," declared Local 420's associate director, Lillian Roberts. She faced possible jailing under a state law that bans strikes by public employes.

The cause of the strike was the planned layoff by the Health and Hospitals Corp. of an additional 1,350 employes because of the city's financial crisis. The layoffs were recommended by a special three-member panel appointed by Mayor Abraham D. Beame earlier this summer to conduct a fiscal review of the municipal hospital system.

16 others sentenced for coup attempt

81 men executed in Sudan

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — The Sudanese government executed 81 men early today for the abortive attempt to overthrow President Jaafar el-Numairi last month, the official Omdurman Radio announced.

The broadcast said 16 other persons were sentenced to prison terms ranging from 10 years to life. Numairi personally approved all the sentences, the radio said.

Sentences against Brig. Mohammed Nur Saad, the alleged leader of the rebellion, and 230 others also tried last week by two special military tribunals will be announced after Numairi reviews them, the broadcast added.

More executions were expected.

The broadcast did not say how the men were executed or give their names. But a list of the defendants published last week showed all were Sudanese.

Numairi charged after the attempted coup was put down July 3 that it was the work of 2,000 mercenaries and fugitive Sudanese who were trained and armed by Col. Moammar Khadafy's radical Libyan government.

The coup attempt began July 2 as Numairi was arriving at the capital's airport after a trip to the United States and Western Europe.

Only 36 inches tall, but Little Nick was all man

ENID, Okla. (AP) — Three-foot-tall Nicu De Barcsy, also known as Baron Capitain, is dead at 91.

For half a century, Little Nick, as he was known to his countless friends, walked the streets of Drummond, often with his trick dog Snowball at his heels, a large cigar in one hand and his cane in the other.

From three feet, he surveyed the world and found it just barely big enough.

Born Feb. 28, 1885, at Budapest, Hungary, he was the son of Baron Anton and Madame Sidonia De Barcsy. It was a time of upheaval in Hungary and Baron De Barcsy, who served in the military, was forced to flee the country with his family or be destroyed.

They moved to western Europe, and found a new life with the circus.

Nicu had weighed only 1¾ pounds at birth and was one of the smallest perfectly formed human beings. After his birth, Madame De Barcsy grew a full beard.

Baron De Barcsy weighed 392 pounds and stood 6'3" in his stocking feet.

Little Nick often performed standing in the palm of his father's outstreched hand.

In 1903, the De Barcsy Troope, as they were known, came to America.

Nicu was 18 at the time. During the next nine years they worked with various shows, among them the famous Ringling Brothers.

In 1912, while they were in winter quarters with the Bill Campbell circus on the east edge of Drummond, Little Nick's father died.

The loss of the Baron caused Madame De Barcsy to go into semiretirement. But from time to time she and her son would make special appearances, always returning to Drummond.

In 1925, Madame De Barcsy died, and Nicu continued on alone. His appearances were on a limited basis and he seldom appeared in public, fearing he would be kidnaped. In 1932, Nick retired completely from show business. He returned to his four-room house in Drummond and spent his days working with his dogs, doing card tricks for the amusement of his friends and tending his chickens and the flock of doves he imported from France.

Although a scant three feet tall, he insisted on being treated as a man and he dressed the part. In his appearances in Drummond, he often wore a full suit, complete with vest, cane and high hat. In later years, he relaxed his dress code to include a cap, long-sleeve shirt with striped overalls and cowboy boots — boys' size 11-D — and a tie.

Lord Thomson, news tycoon, dies

DONALD V.

LONDON (AP) — Lord Thomson of Fleet, Canadian-born chairman of the vast Thomson newspaper empire, died in a London hospital today. He was 82.

Thomson was admitted to the hospital a month ago for treatment of a chest infection following a cold and severe stroke.

Thomson built a publishing empire that included about 180 newspapers, some 105 magazines and several radio and television stations in Britain, Ireland, the United States, Canada, Africa, Asia and the West Indies. The newspapers included the Times and the Sunday Times in London and the Scotsman in Edinburgh.

The value of his business operations has been estimated at a minimum $180 million, with $36 million as his personal fortune.

Lord Thomson's death will not result in any change in his family's control of the Thomson Organization, Ltd., said a statement from the group's directors.

For many years, they said, the Thomson family's interest in the organization has been held by Lord Thomson's children and trusts for their children.

"Death came very peacefully after he had put up a terrific fight to survive," said Sir Denis Hamilton, chairman of The Times newspapers.

$1,100 contributed to restore school bungalow

Pledges totaling $1,100 have been received towards the renovation of the 68-year-old Barbara Greenwood Arroyo Kindergarten Bungalow in Pomona.

June Hyman, chairman of the committee working to preserve the bungalow as a historic landmark, said the group currently is attempting to raise $7,000 of the estimated $20,000 needed to bring the building up to code. Donations of $5,000 to pay moving costs already are in.

The $7,000, she explained, would take care of foundation and roofing needs at the new site on Casa Primera property at Park and McKinley Avenues.

"We have a mid-August moving date," said Mrs. Hyman. "To move the bungalow from the Arroyo school grounds up to the new location it will be necessary to remove the roof.

"Much of the cost will be in lumber and carpentry to restore the roof after the move is complete."

Mrs. Hyman said that the committee feels that after the bungalow is placed on the Casa Primera property the other required projects can be undertaken one at a time.

These needs include sanitation and sewer work, electrical work, plastering and patching, glazing and windows and termite control.

The Barbara Greenwood Lectureship and Scholarship Committee at UCLA had contributed $520 toward the bungalow project, Mrs. Hyman said. Two other "substantial" donations have been made by community residents who wish to remain anonymous, she added.

Those who wish to donate labor or materials may call Mrs. Hyman at 593-1106.

Those who wish to make cash contributions may mail checks made out to the Barbara Greenwood Account to June Hyman, 264 Ford Ave., Pomona 91768.

Uses of the bungalow, once it is restored, are still to be determined, but those being anticipated are small group meetings, conferences, workshops for children in drama, arts and puppetry and, since it has a small stage, a little theater group, Mrs. Hyman said.

Claremont School District

Continuation school principal hired

The Claremont school board has approved the hiring of a 25-year-old Massachusetts man as new principal at San Antonio Continuation High School, effective immediately.

Rudolph Crew, the finalist among more than 100 applicants, is completing his work for a doctor of education degree at the University of Massachusetts.

Crew, married and the father of a 4-year-old son, spent 1973-75 as a secondary teacher in the Pasadena alternative school.

A native of New York, Crew graduated from high school there before attending Babson College in Massachusetts where he received a bachelor's degree. He majored in management and minored in economics.

He received an M.A. degree in urban education at the University of Massachusetts.

The past year he served as coordinator of the alternative school program and in-service teacher program at Boston English High School.

The board also approved the reassignment of government and social science teacher Michael Slovik to dean of activities at Claremont High effective Aug. 16.

Slovik succeeds Jeff Daley who has been appointed vice-principal at El Roble Intermediate School.

Valley Council of Peace

Hiroshima observance scheduled

The Pomona Valley Council for Peace will hold its annual Hiroshima Day observance Sunday at 7:30 p.m. at the Friends Meeting House, 727 W. Harrison Ave., Claremont.

John Hutchison, Claremont Graduate School faculty member, will lead panel of educators Fred Warner Neal, Claremont Graduate School; John Moore, Cal Poly Pomona; and Yuri Kite of Japan in a discussion of "The Nuclear Race: 31 Years After."

Koichi Shirokawa, youth peace seminarian, will bring greetings from Nagasaki, one of the Japanese cities hit by an atomic bomb in August 1945.

Other participants will be Andy Wingert, guitarist and song leader from Claremont; and Josephone and Leslie Sayre, also of Claremont, who will read from "Songs of Hiroshima."

Slides will be shown of drawings by people who remember the bombing.

Members of the Japanese community also will attend.

Japanese tea will be served as guests are arriving.

The evening program will close with a candle-lighting ceremony in memory of the thousands who lost their lives when the atomic bombs were dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Blind hear information

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A talking computer is being used by Civil Service here to aid its blind employes.

The experimental program makes it possible for workers to get information from a Honeywell computer in audible as well as printed form. This is accomplished by transmitting electronic impulses from the computer to a voice synthesizer which constructs words. Past methods for supplying computer information were printouts, video-display and braille for the blind. The six-month test is funded in part by a grant from the U.S. Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare.

What's going on around here

CONTRACT AWARDED—The Navy has awarded the General Dynamics Corp. a $3.2 million contract to continue production and engineering on the Standard Missile.

The grant from the Naval Sea Systems Command specifies that all work be performed in Pomona, said Rep. Jim Lloyd, D-35th Dist.

No room needed; she just sleeps on trains

BLACKPOOL, England (AP) — Phyllis Fogden, a dishwasher in a restaurant at the Blackpool seaside, spends every night traveling around northwest England on six trains.

"Slumbering away on train after train is just perfect. I sleep like a log and everyone is so polite," said the 51-year-old spinster.

Miss Fogden buys a "regional runabout" ticket for $12.42 a week which entitles her to unlimited travel over a section of the railway network.

Every night she takes the 8:40 from Blackpool east to Preston, changes to the 9:52 going north to Carlisle, takes the 1:30 a.m. south to Wigan and heads north again at 3 a.m. to Barrow-in-Furness.

Arriving there at 5:50, she walks in the park and eats the breakfast she takes with her, feeds the pigeons and then boards the 8:40 south to Preston. At Preston she has time for a cup of tea before catching the 9:06 west to Blackpool and work at 11 a.m.

Miss Fogden said she took to the rails because it's cheaper than a rooming house.

LITTLE MASTER

Jason Jon Burris, 3-year-old son of Dennis and Melanie Burris of Montclair, displays the smile and charm that helped him win title of master of California in state competition for the 1976-77 Miss Hemisphere Beauty Pageant.

A touch of the bubbly

Montclair boy, 3, becomes youngest pageant winner

Jason Jon Burris is a 3-year-old charmer, filled with laughter, bubbly talk and giggles, a tiny dynamo of friendliness.

These traits may help explain how the moppet son of Dennis and Melanie Burris of Montclair, captured the title in the master division of the 1976-77 Miss Hemisphere Beauty Pageant. And the pictures, certificates of award and trophies in the den at 9841 Santa Anita Ave. show he has been a winner since he was about 15 months old.

Jason will be the master division representative for California during the competition at Walt Disney World near Orlando, Fla. later this month. He won over other young boys, ages 3 to 7, in the Santa Ana region and in the state pageant to win the distinction of being the youngest competitor in the total pageant.

Besides the master division, the contest includes girls in the categories of peewee (2-5); little miss (6-10); pre-teen (11-13); teen (14-17); and miss (18-27). The pageant is sponsored by Miss Hemisphere Inc. with headquarters in Philadelphia, Pa.

Pageants are almost old hat to Jason now and he has captured eight trophies in three years. His trophies crowd out his father's bowling and softball statues on the fireplace mantle. In the Navy Mothers Club 444 baby pageant and Little Guys and Gals Show for 1974 and 1975 in the valley he has taken first place in his age group, the total master division up to six years and the personality award. He was Pomona Valley Supreme Marquis in the 1975 Navy Mothers contests.

Though an asthmatic child since birth, he is filled with pep and spirit, his cheeks are rosy and his pace is quick.

"His picture was at the Broadway for nearly two years and someone there sent it to a man named Mr. Williams in the Santa Ana contest," Mrs. Burris said, explaining Jason's entry into the hemisphere competition. "He coaxed us into entering Jason, saying he would be a winner with his smile and personality. So we did it. He was sponsored by the Pacific Mat Finishing Co."

Braswell shift brings 50-cent cut in tax rate

By PHYLLIS CANNON
PB Staff Writer

The Pomona school board Tuesday adopted a final 1976-77 budget of $38.4 million built on a cut in the general purpose tax rate of slightly more than 50 cents per $100 of assessed valuation.

The tax cut proposed reduces the amount of money to be held in reserves by the district.

As board Vice President C. Allan Braswell noted, it leaves enough money in reserves, some $4.9 million, to meet costs of pay raises for teachers, fund special programs yet to be approved by the board and still keep reserves at 10 per cent of budget.

Only a week ago, the board was 30 cents short of this 50-cent cut when they agreed to a 20-cent cut during a discussion on the tax rate. The 20-cent cut was a compromise with three board members holding out for that amount, and two others pushing for an even greater reduction.

In the absence of vacationing board President Mary Montes, Braswell conducted the meeting, held at Diamond Point Elementary School in Diamond Bar.

In an about-face in his position, Braswell, who during the long budget process had resisted cutting the tax rate, made the motion to drop the rate from $4.7029 to $4.20 per $100 of assessed evaluation and adopt the $38.4 million final document.

His motion was seconded by member Gene Whitlock, who with member Ken Pine, were the strongest champions of cutting the tax rate. The final vote was unanimous.

The final budet shows income of $33.6 million, expenditures of $33.4 million with $4.9 million in reserves for the $38.4 million total. Of the $4.9 million reserves, $4.7 million is money left over from 1975-76.

If permissive taxes levied in the district last year remain constant at $1.1843 per $100 of assessed evaluation into 1976-77, the district's total tax rate for next year will be $5.3843.

The final budget is $6.4 million greater than the $32.8 million general fund budget adopted by the board in 1975-76 which reflected reserves of $3.3 million in funds left from 1974-75.

General fund budgets do not include federal and other special project monies, which last year added up to about $5 million in the district, or cafeteria, building or child development accounts.

Along with adopting the final budget, the board approved a $1.7 million budget for the cafeteria system for next year, a $1 million building fund budget, a special building reserve fund of $160,462 and a state school building fund of $32,316.

The budget now goes to Los Angeles County Schools Office for submission to county Board of Supervisors where tax rates are set.

In their second request before the board, administrators Tuesday were authorized to apply for funds for child care available under the state's new Foran Law. A week ago the board denied the request 3-2.

Tuesday the vote for a reduced program built on a $175,000 application won board approval by a 3-1 vote.

Whitlock voted no, explaining that while he favored child care centers he did not believe the schools should be involved because state monies may disappear and the district may have to fund the program.

Sid Moses, assistant superintendent of educational services, said if the $175,0000 application is funded, the district would be able to reinstate child care to the level offered in 1974-75 and add one service, child care in emergency situations.

Ontario council asked to take action

Neighborhood dispute spiraling

By L. T. ROGERS
Asst. City Editor

Residents on E. El Morado Court in Ontario will meet with police in an attempt to resolve a problem caused by young adults who congregate at a neighborhood home.

The meeting was arranged Tuesday night after numerous residents called on the City Council to provide some action in preserving the area's serenity.

The center of controversy involved a residence in the 300 block of E. El Morado Court. Complaints, however, were registered by persons within a radius of several blocks.

In a petition submitted to the council, residents stated they had been subjected to "an intolerable misuse of the neighborhood due to the activities of one household."

"In the course of these activities large numbers of adolescents have converged on the neighborhood with attendant increases of noise and abusive language, trespassing, clogged parking and resultant arrest of movement by citizens residing in the vicinity," it added.

Some 20 persons attended the City Council session to bolster their complaints.

A spokesman reported he had called police three times during one evening to disperse a crowd. And while noting that most of the persons causing problems are under 21, he said many were under the influence of drugs or alcohol.

While praising the work of police officers, he asked what residents must do to "get action."

City Atty. Samuel Crowe said citizens must cooperate with police by providing them with advance information to make an arrest. He said they must also identify the individuals committing the crime and sign a complaint.

The complaining residents reported that one girl did sign a complaint against persons who had made abusive remarks to her and they were still seeking to get the disposition of the case from the district attorney's office.

City Manager Roger Hughbanks offered to check on the mater and report back to the residents.

Some residents offered to call City Council members the next time there is a disturbance in the neighborhood. "This will make you aware of what goes on in the 2½-block area," said one.

In response to a remark that police might not route a crowd of some 300 persons, Mayor Paul Treadway said the city is not totally dependent on its own police size but had an agreement to call in officers from adjoining police agencies.

Hughbanks said today he had contacted Police Capt. James Brundy and he would meet with the El Morado Court residents as soon as possible.

School tax climbs in Cucamonga

By DAVID READER
PB Correspondent

A final budget of $2.4 million for the 1976-77 school year was adopted by Cucamonga's central school board Tuesday evening.

It calls for an increase of 11 cents per $100 of assessed valuation, according to Dist. Supt. Donald Sperry. The new tax rate, subject to some minor adjustment by the county, is $2.53.

The final budget figure includes a reserve fund balance of $230,645,and compares to a budget of $2.2 million for 1975-76. Salary increases for certificated and classified employes, which are currently being negotiated, would come out of reserve fund money.

In a related matter, the board agreed to have the district continue paying the same amount of the employes dental insurance as in the previous year, $99 per individual. But since the rates on the insurance have risen to $129 per person, the board approved the idea by Supt. Don Sperry that $3 per month be deducted from the salaries of certificated and classified employes to pay for the difference until such time as salary negotiations are completed.

The district, however, will pay the full $129 for the insurance of district administrative personnel and confidential employes.

The board officially passed a resolution giving the approval for the $10 million school bond election to be held on Nov. 2.

Approved by the board was the renewal of a contract with A-1 Linen Supply for the furnishing of towels to Cucamonga Junior High at the cost of $2,000 per year. The cost per towel is to be 10 cents, while in the previous year it had been eight cents.

Four charges filed

Pomonan held in hit-run case

An 18-year-old Pomonan was arrested by local police Tuesday and charged with felony hit and run, grand theft auto, driving while under the influence of drugs and driving without a license in his possession.

Richard Joseph Hanson, 1752 S. Reservoir St., was arrested about 5:40 p.m. after a short foot chase by officers.

Police said that Hanson was chased and captured after his car struck a car driven by Valentine Lena Horton, 335 Canfield Ave., Pomona, at Towne Avenue and Mission Boulevard.

Miss Horton was treated at Pomona Valley Community Hospital for a sprain.

Hanson was admitted to Pomona Valley Community Hospital and later transferred to County-USC Medical Center.

Police said that Hanson earlier drove a car which struck a chain link fence at La Mesa and Seventh Street, a utility pole on Ninth Street 50 feet east of La Mesa Street, and a parked vehicle on Grand Avenue, west of San Antonio Avenue.

Warren Johnson of 938 E. Grand Ave. told officers he and his wife were working on their parked car at the curb when they heard a speeding car which missed making a turn into a driveway and hit the Johnson car instead.

The other car then backed into a fence across the street and sped off, Johnson said.

A pleasant surprise: freeway bid $600,000 under estimate

State highway officials received a pleasant surprise when the apparent low bid for a 1.2-mile segment of the Devore Freeway near Ontario was about $600,000 less than expected.

The E.L. Yeager Construction Co., Riverside, submitted a bid of $5,240,146 for the project that will extend the interstate route south from a major interchange at the San Bernardino Freeway near the Ontario Motor Speedway to Jurupa Avenue.

State officials had estimated the cost of the project at $5.8 million. Five bids were received. These included Kasler Corp., San Bernardino, $5,422,222; Novo-Rados Construction Co., Chino, $5,554,682; F.W. Maxwell, San Diego, $5,852,515; and McCutcheon, Peterson, Hensler, Anaheim, $6,163,601.

The Yeager bid was sent to Sacramento for review before a contract is awarded. Officials said the process takes about three weeks. They anticipate another three to four weeks before the contractor begins work on the site.

The project will include extending the interchange at the San Bernardino Freeway across the Southern Pacific railroad tracks plus constructing another bridge above Jurupa Avenue. The work will involve on and off ramps for both bridges. There will also be about a mile of roadway.

Officials hope to award another contract later this year to extend the Devore Freeway from Jurupa to the Pomona Freeway, a distance of about 1.4 miles. That project will include a multi-level interchange with the Pomona Freeway and about one mile of roadway.

Completion of that section between the San Bernardino and Pomona freeways is expected within two years.

The Devore Freeway is destined to extend from the Barstow Freeway north of San Bernardino to San Diego, a distance of 102 miles.

Sections of the 15-mile segment north of the San Bernardino Freeway to the Barstow Freeway are either completed or under construction.

Motorists may now drive on the Devore Freeway north from the San Bernardino Freeway interchange to Foothill Boulevard, a distance of three miles, and from Sierra Avenue near Fontana to near Glen Helen Road where it joins an existing six-lane freeway section that connects with the Barstow Freeway.

San Antonio Hospital

Larger mental health unit to be dedicated

Dedication of the new mental health unit of San Antonio Community Hospital, Upland, is scheduled Thursday and Friday.

Dr. Edward Stainbrook, chairman of human behavior at the USC department of psychiatry, will give the dedication address in Alta Auditorium Thursday noon.

State, county and city officials have been invited to join with hospital board members, administrators and friends of the hospital to celebrate the opening of the expanded facilities.

Additional ceremonies for the public are planned on Friday.

Dr. Stainbrook has been the chief psychiatrist at Los Angeles County-USC Medical Center, chairman of the department of psychiatry at State University of New York and director of the Yale University Psychiatric Clinic and Hospital. He has worked on the CBS television series "The Troubled Self" and "Conversations with a Psychiatrist."

The new mental healtn unit is the realization of a goal of several years and is a major phase in the long range plan of the hospital to meet the anticipated growth of the service area which includes Upland, Ontario, Alta Loma, Cucamonga, Etiwanda, Montclair and Chino.

The new unit will provide 50 inpatient beds and facilities and programs for 40 to 50 day treatment patients.

Architectural designers Harnish, Morgan and Causey designed the unit following the concept that an open plan would best meet the needs as described by the psychiatrists and hospital staff on the design team.

Since most of the patients are ambulatory, the unit has been designed to provide exercise and recreation. The environment has been integrated with the exterior with the use of skylights.

Inpatient treatment includes sleep therapy, hypnosis, chemo-therapy, recreational therapy, occupational therapy, physical therapy, biofeedback, alcoholic program and psychodrama.

Hairdressing and laundry facilities, television and stereo music rooms are available.

Dr. Gary J. Voorman, who has served as director of the mental health unit since its inception in 1966, will continue in this capacity.

The psychiatric committee of San Antonio Community Hospital is headed by Dr. Robert L. Zondervan. Committee members are Drs. L.F. Iacueo, Harvey Breen, Merriman Hamblin, J.F. Miley, J.H. Phelps and the director.

Putting curbs on probation

Two bills that have passed the State Senate and are now going to the Assembly represent an important step toward some overdue changes in the criminal justice system.

These bills, SB 1453 and 2025, both authored by Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach, will restrict the court in granting probation for convicted felons who bodily injure or kill their victims or who cause bodily injury to elderly, blind, or paraplegic persons.

SB 1453 would require that the court state, for the record, its reasons for granting probation if it found extraordinary or compelling reasons for such action. It would also require the probation officer, in preparing his report on the convicted person, to include a statement on the views of the injured person or victim concerning the offense.

SB 2025 will deny probation to any person who commits or attempts to commit a crime against a person he knew, or reasonably should have known, is 65 years of age or older, blind, paraplegic, or quadriplegic, and inflicts bodily harm.

Also, the juvenile court will lose original jurisdiction on those suspects between the ages of 16 and 18. Thus, this bill will allow the adult court to remand the juvenile to the juvenile court if the circumstances indicate that it would be proper to do so.

Both bills have unanimously passed the Senate but will need citizen support for final passage through the Assembly. We urge our readers to write to the Assembly Criminal Justice Committee supporting the passage of these bills. The members are Assemblyman Alan Sieroty, Chairman, Room 2140; assemblyman Art Torres, Room 5130; Julian Dixon, Room 5016; John Knox, Room 2148; Kenneth L. Maddy, Room 2016; Bruce Nestande, Room 2151; all at the State Capitol, Sacramento 95814.

Needed changes will come about only when citizens voice their disillusionment over the present system — a system that is failing to protect innocent, law-abiding citizens.

Could be a mudbath

If Jimmy Carter is the canny politician he has proven himself to be so far, he will stick to his announced intention of not making Watergate an issue in the coming presidential campaign.

Despite the cheers elicited by a couple of not-so-veiled references to it at the Democratic Convention — Carter's line about "big-shot crooks" who go free while little ones go to jail, and runningmate Walter F. Mondale's allusion to the man who pardoned the man responsible for it all — there may be much less political hay to be made of Watergate among the population at large then there is danger of a boomerang effect.

By this time, surely, all those Americans who were offended or outraged by Gerald Ford's pardon of Richard Nixon have decided whether or not they can forgive Mr. Ford. The worst that can be said about it today is what was said at the time, that it was a mistake or premature or a denial of due process, but not that it wasn't done in good faith, as Mr. Carter himself agrees.

An awful lot of other polluted political water has gone over the gate since 1974, and Republicans, if forced to, would not be slow in reminding voters that Democrats have been found swimming in the midst of it.

We have learned, for instance, that the practice of Executive wiretapping and spying on private citizens dates back at least to Franklin D. Roosevelt, who ordered the FBI to prepare dossiers on Americans who opposed involvement in the war in Europe. Even the martyred and virtually sainted John F. Kennedy and his brother have been implicated in activities far more sinister than Watergate.

If Watergate is a burden all Republicans carry, the passing of time, not to mention the emergence of other scandals, has served to put it into better perspective. Richard Nixon is viewed today less as a menace to the country than as a pathetic figure. The "bitter end" defense of him by some Republicans should at least be contrasted with the dismal record of Democratically-controlled Congresses in disciplining their own wrongdoing.

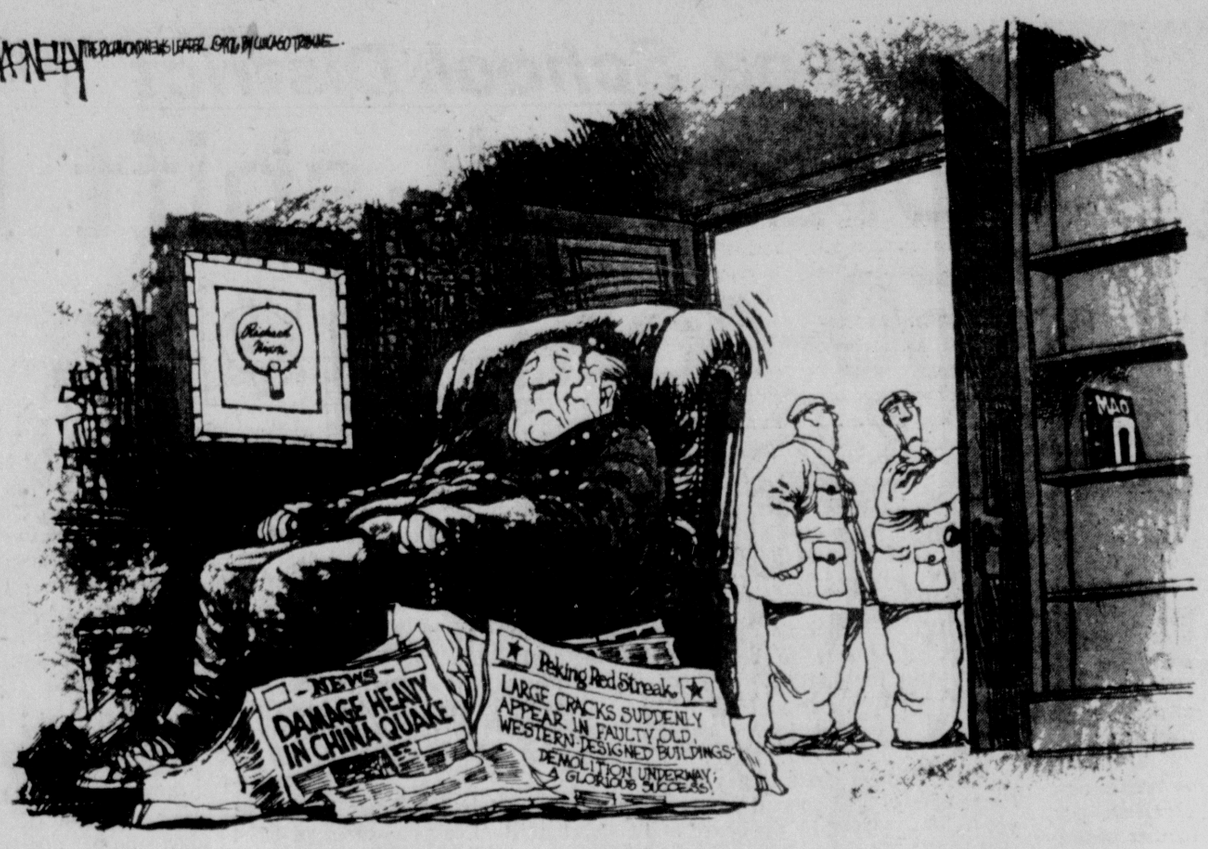

In short, there is plenty of mud that could be dragged up by both sides. Jimmy Carter is too smart, and one hopes, too honorable a man, to start that kind of fight.

Just in jest

Now that the fireworks and the parading are over and most celebrants have recovered from their July 4th Bicentennial hangovers, what are we Americans going to do to keep amused and happy? Well, have no fear! In the fine art of providing themselves with never ending entertainment, the people of this country still remain unsurpassed.

— In Eau Claire, Michigan, for instance, they are holding a Cherry Pit Spitting Contest. — And since apparently the long Bicentennial Birthday weekend's slaughter on the highways failed to satiate us, it is now possible to sit behind the wheel of a simulated automobile and play a computerized game in which you chase images of people across an electronic playing board.

If you score a direct hit, the shadow people shriek like wounded rabbits. Some fun what? — But for the more subtle humorists who just can't resist an opportunity to share the laughs with friends and acquaintances, Farmers Market, In Los Angeles, has a gift department item called "Southern California Canned Smog."

— And let's never overlook the humor inspiring antics of our amorous Congressmen. There's enough material there to keep us viewing with delicious alarm for months to come.

Contrived need for taxes

Dear Editor:

Take away a man's home and money, his personal and real property without legitimate reason, and that damaged person has valid cause to rebel, and strike back if need be.

That, in substance, is the case against bilingual-bicultural education, in Pomona and nationwide, socio-economically.

1. Equivalent to about one-fourth of the world's population, at least 1 billion, 100 million registered aliens have come across the Mexico-U.S. border between 1923, (when the official census began) and 1965, according to U.S. Immigration official records. Since 1965, both legal and illegal entries from Mexico to the U.S. have increased dramatically.

2. In 1964-65 alone, when the War on Poverty and Civil Rights Act were initiated, there were nearly 132 million entries reported officially. And illegal aliens were "returned," (not deported,) at the rate of 1,000 per month from the L.A. basin area alone. (U.S. immigration officials admitted then being severely understaffed.)

3. Today, more Mexican citizens reside in the L.A. basin area than in any city in the world, except Mexico City, (and possibly Guadalajara).

4. According to immigration records, more than 90% of Mexican citizens who have established legal residence in the U.S. have chosen not to become American citizens. Under HEW, (Health, Education and Welfare) federal protection, Mexican immigrants legally can enjoy greater benefits from both countries by retaining Mexican citizenship while residing permanently in the United States.

5. The July 7, 1976 Progress Bulletin news report of "2,600 illegal aliens cut from welfare," with savings of "2.7 million" dollars reflects a cost to taxpayers of more than $1 million per 1,000 illegal aliens receiving welfare in this case.

6. Using $1 million per 1,000 as ratio, 1 million aliens on welfare costs taxpayers at least $1 billion. In addition, vast sums of money are required for bilingual-bicultural schooling, food stamps, medical needs, foreign language printing costs involving voting and other public services. Small Business Administration federal loans, ad infinitum, from the womb to the tomb.

7. Federal Immigration officials are powerless (against Health, Education and Welfare bureaucratic forces) to enforce the prime requirement made of any immigrant seeking permanent residency in the U.S.: that said alien will not "even be likely to become a public charge" to American taxpayers. (Sections 212, sub section 15 and 241A of the Basic Immigration and Nationality Act, as Amended, 5th edition.)

8. On June 22, 1967, nine years ago, Congressman Ed Roybal of Los Angeles, in his statement supporting bilingual education made to a special subcommittee of the U.S. Senate, said: ". . . The primary beneficiaries of any nation-wide bilingual education program would undoubtedly be Spanish speaking children.

"However, under (his bill) H.R. 8000, the benefits of bilingual education would also be shared by American youngsters from a wide variety of other family linguistic and cultural backgrounds: French, Oriental, American Indian, Eskimo, Portuguese, Greek, Italian, Polish, Hungarian and many more.

"In fact, I would anticipate that the number of children from many of these linguistic groups will increase substantially in the next few years as a result of the recent liberalization of the Immigration Act."

And so it has! In Pomona and nationwide, the most expensive commodity of every household is taxes. And like bilingual education, the contrived need requiring more and more just grows, grows and grows.

Citizens study solon salaries

By EARL G. WATERS

A state labor leader has actively embraced the plan for a citizens committee to study the issue of legislative salaries. The idea was advanced last month following the defeat of the Legislature's measure to create a seven-man commission for that purpose.

James S. Lee, president of the 350,000 member State Building Trades Council, said he is taking the initiative by inviting the State Chamber of Commerce and the California Taxpayers Association to meet with him to discuss the formation of a committee composed of members of the three groups.

Such a plan was endorsed recently by two former Senate leaders, Democrat Hugh N. Burns and Republican Harold J. "Butch" Powers. Both served more than three decades in the Legislature. Burns was Senate President Pro Tem for 12 years and Powers, also a President Pro Tem, served 6 years as lieutenant governor.

In calling for the meeting Lee said, "I think the determination of salaries for the Legislature and other high state officials should be made by the people. I believe it is the civic responsibility for organizations such as ours to offer our resources to assist in this important matter. I am taking the lead simply because somebody has to get the ball rolling."

He said he will propose the committee study both the salary issue and the manner in which the Legislature should operate as well.

"Look, he explained, "we now have had the Legislature working full time since 1967. For the past four years it has been in continuous two-year sessions. The Legislature and the governor have both endorsed the "sunset concept" for regulatory agencies which legislate. Why shouldn't the same review apply to the Legislature itself? I think we should study how it has been performing and whether or not the people want full-time lawmakers or would prefer citizen-legislators and shorter sessions. Before we decide what is appropriate pay for the job we better understand what job the people want done."

Explaining why he believes the three groups named should make the study, he said. "Who has more expertise in the matter of pay then industry and labor? These organizations have a wealth of members far more competent to make such determinations than any commission which could be put together. We are also more representative of all the people than any seven-man commission created by the Legislature would be. And we have first hand experience dealing with the Legislature to enable us to make the judgments on how it can best function."

As Lee sees it the committee would prepare a plan defining the function of the Legislature together with proposals for compensation. It would then be presented to the Legislature for submission to the voters.

"In the final analysis it will be the voters who will decide," he asserted. "All we can do is give them our best judgments as to what, from the broad base of experience which would be represented in such a committee, will serve the best interests of all the people. And if industry and labor can agree on the proposals it shoud come pretty close to being the best for all of the people."

He added that he believes recommendations coming from such a committee "will be far better received by the press and the public in general than anything which might have resulted from the commission the Legislature had proposed."

"I am afraid it would have been suspect from the beginning," he reflected. "After all it would have been created by the Legislature and subject to pressures from the legislators. The people who would serve on the committee I propose can be more objective."

AID officials live high in Haiti

WASHINGTON — Nestled high on the hills above Port-Au-Prince are fashionable, walled villas, equipped with sparkling swimming pools and staffed by gracious servants.

This is where the U.S. AID officials reside with their families. They came to Haiti to administer U.S. aid. Their mission is to help develop the impoverished nation and feed its hungry people.

A generous portion of the U.S. offering goes to maintain the AID administrators in the high style they have adopted. They live in luxury; they are waited on by servants; they belong to exclusive private clubs. In the evenings, they attend lavish cocktail and dinner parties, where the guests can sample the varied delights of creole cooking.

Yet believe it or not, they collect extra hardship pay for enduring the rigors of Port-Au-Prince. This amounts to an additional 15 per cent, which is tacked on to their salaries. They are also granted two extra weeks of stateside vacation, on top of their normal leave, to recuperate from the hard life.

They draw a generous housing allowance to help pay the rent on their fancy villas. They make biweekly flights to Guantanamo Bay to pick up inexpensive American food from the U.S. commissary. They can claim a generous "educational allowance," too, to help with their children's education

The AID staff had become so accustomed to the good life, they almost moved their offices into an old luxury hotel, complete with swimming pool and palm-shaded verandas. But it occurred to them the hotel might be a bit ostentatious, so they settled for a more modest building.

After hundreds of thousands of dollars have been squeezed out of the AID budget for the care and comfort of the administrators, the money is usually turned over to the Haitian government to distribute.

Additional amounts are diverted into the pockets of Haitian officials. Grain intended for the poor, for example, has been stolen and sold for profit by corrupt customs officials.

We sent our reporter, Hal Bernton, to Haiti to find out whether any of the aid reaches the people for whom it was intended. With a knapsack on his back, he traveled to the most desolate, drought-stricken region of the tiny Caribbean country. He hiked through the parched mountains to a remote village and lived for more than a week with the people.

He saw naked children too weak from hunger to play, their hair rusted and their bellies bloated by malnutrition.

The villages subsisted largely on mangoes, sucking out every precious drop of juice. But the last mango would soon be devoured. The people didn't know what they would eat after that.

The U.S. AID officials are usually too busy planning and partying in Port-Au-Prince to visit the villagers in their mud huts. Those who make rare appearances usually drive through on jeeps. Most are too tied up with paperwork to leave their desks. They are also reluctant to leave their comfortable quarters.

During the fiscal year that ended on June 30, the U.S. taxpayers donated nearly $18 million in foreign aid to Haiti. A tiny trickle of food-for-work has reached the remote village Bernton visited.

In the past, U.S. aid has helped to build hospitals, construct roads, tap water and distribute food. This has saved lives and alleviated suffering. But it's the AID officials who are the most comforted, the Haitian officials who are enriched.

OSHA rules hard to enforce

By TERRY WADE
PB Washington Writer

WASHINGTON — There is a continuing conflict between what's right in Washington and what's right in the rest of the country.

The conflict also exists between what's right in Texas and what's right in Hawaii or Missouri, etc.

A proposed regulation by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA to those who deal with this sort of thing) is a perfect example of this problem. (There are those who would argue that nearly all OSHA activities would serve as an example.)

OSHA, prodded by the courts, developed a regulation that would require rest rooms, drinking water, toilet paper and all the other amenities needed for proper hygiene for field workers.

That sounds like a reasonable request — if you're at a desk in Washington, miles from the nearest field.

If you happen to be working on a 60,000 acre ranch in the West it sounds downright ridiculous, especially in light of the requirement that all this be within a five minute walk of the worker.

Heck! There are fields in Wyoming that are more than five minutes from everything.

If the regulations were to become law the rest room construction business would receive a big boost.

A few scratches with a pen and paper show that a rest room would have to be placed every 1,300 feet or so to meet that five minute walking distance requirement.

At that rate the wide open spaces in the West wouldn't stay that way long.

Aside from the aesthetic loss of the open prairie the cost might be a little steep, also.

No, a roll of toilet paper stashed in the pickup truck in case of emergencies and a big bush has always been the order, albeit a little uncomfortable, of the day.

Still there is a need for this type of regulation, according to OSHA people, and they make a good argument.

The claim documented evidence that there are employers of migrant farm hands that deprive the workers of drinking water during the day and the opportunity to relieve themselves.

It is another classic example of a few poor excuses for employers causing regulations to be written for the vast majority.

At least in this case OSHA sees that a general rule cannot apply across the board. A spokesman here has indicated hearings that will be held on the subject will result in some changes in the scope of the rules.

It isn't likely the wheat farmer in Oklahoma or the rice farmer in Arkansas will have to meet the standards.

Hopefully it will also prevent some poor soul going all day with a problem we've all had at one time or another.

Dormant refund from seed firm blooms

I ordered some garden spray and bug powder last March from Gurney Seed and Nursery Co. in Yankton, S.D.

When the order failed to arrive in a month or so, I wrote to the company to ask why, but received no answer.

Neither did I get an answer from a second letter sent May 18.

Then I wrote to the Yankton Chamber of Commerce. After that I received a refund of $4.67. The check I had sent to Gurney for merchandise never received was $23.24.

With the money I spent for stamps and duplicate copies, plus interest on my check, I think the company owes me $19.84. — D.J., Chino.

Our inquiry to Gurney Seed and Nursery Co. brought a copy of a $19.84 refund issued to you. The Gurney check was dated three days after our letter to the firm.

* * *

I'm writing to you in the hope you can help me with a problem I've been trying to solve for almost four months.

On Jan. 14 I paid a $20 deposit on a wrought iron fireplace screen to a Mrs. M. of Ontario.

After 2½ weeks, I hadn't received the screen so I called Mrs. M. to find out if I could expect it shortly. She said she had mechanical problems with her van and wasn't able to make the trip to pick it up for me yet and that it would probably be another week.

After nine days had passed and I hadn't heard anything, I called her again. She hadn't been able to make the trip since her van wasn't repaired yet and she was now having problems with her station wagon. She told me she should have the fireplace screen in a week or so for sure.

Next she was sick with the flu. In March I called her number and spoke with her daughter. She told her daughter, I was informed, she could not get the screen for me and she'd have to refund my deposit. She never did.

A representative of the San Bernardino County Consumer Affairs Office suggested that I take the matter to the small claims court.

As Mrs. M. is aware that she's in the wrong and it doesn't seem to bother her, I doubt that small claims court action would have any effect on her and I would be wasting more of my time and money.

It makes me wonder how many other people she has taken advantage of. — L.R., Upland.

We wrote two letters to Mrs. M. at the address you have us. We had less luck than you did. We got no response at all.

You said you planned to contact the police. We also called to see whether they could help you. We got a negative answer from an officer who said your problem was a civil, not a police matter.

As far as I am concerned, Action Line is just about the most super service provided by a newspaper or other agency for that matter.

After three months I just received my state income tax refund, small, but to me it's a godsend.

Any problem, big or small, Action Line solves them all. — Mrs. A.E., Pomona.

We wish this were true. The letter and reply above your kind letter is evidence that it is not. We do our best and solve all we can.

What people say

"You must be able to transcend your racial origins in a time of crisis . . . Instead of declaring that you are determined to maintain law and order, could you not assure us that you are determined to find out — without prejudgment — why law and order have broken down, and put the wrongs right?"

—South African author Alan Paton in an open letter to that country's Prime Minister.

Experience best of teachers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a widow and soon to be a mother-in-law. I hope I can follow these rules as a gift to my son.

1. I will try to manage my modest income prudently so as not to be a financial burden.
2. I will respect the privacy of his home. I will not visit unless invited. I will realize my son and his wife need time together — alone.
3. I will not hint to go along on vacations or weekend trips.
4. I will not present my son with chores to do on his day off.
5. I will be kind and loving toward his wife, never critical of her housekeeping, cooking or appearance.
6. If there are children, I will show no partiality, nor will I interfere with their discipline.
7. In summary, I will do my best, no matter how lonely, to avoid being a selfish, domineering or clinging mother because my husband had one of those and I know what it did to my life. — Been Through The Mill

Dear Been Through: Your letter is strong testimony that expereince is the best of all teachers.

I find it interesting that 90 per cent of the letters I receive pertaining to in-law problems are complaints against the mother-in-law — not the father-in-law. And 80 per cent of the mother-in-law beefs are against the husband's mother — not the wife's.

Dear Ann Landers: A question frequently asked by students (the majority are girls) is this: "My mom gets bombed every night, double-bombed on weekends, fills the house with smoke, then raises hell when I smoke and gets crazy if I have a drink. Does she have a right to keep me from doing things she says are bad for me when she doesn't practice what she preaches?"

Can you give me, a counselor, some advice on what I should say to these kids? — An Advisor Who Is Seeking Your Advice

Dear Advisor: Tell these kids it's a cop-out to use their parents' weaknesses as an excuse to take the low road.

A drunken, nicotine-addicted mother (or father) has been known to turn some children OFF booze and cigarets as well as on. The decision is strictly up to the individual.

Dear Ann Landers: Why is it that when a husband runs around, has back-street affairs and finally asks his wife for a divorce, she is always the one at fault?

He tells everyone she was stupid, sloppy, cold, uncaring, a nagger, a poor housekeeper, or a lousy bed-partner. Some of these accusations may be true when young couples break up, but when couples have been married 30 or 40 years it doesn't figure. Why would a man stay with a woman so long if she had those undesirable traits?

If there was some way to take the tramps out of circulation, the long-standing marriages would stick. When a man cheats on his wife he has to give a reason and it's NEVER his fault. Fascinating, isn't it? — Shafted In Flint

Dear Shafted: There are as many reasons for marriage break-ups as there are marriages.

The man (or woman) who runs down an ex tells more about himself than he tells about the ex. Nobody can sling mud without getting a little on himself.

It's not always easy to recognize love, especially the first time around. Acquaint yourself with the guidelines. Read Ann Landers' booklet, "Love or Sex and How To Tell the Difference." For a copy, mail 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Focusing on the shutter-bug

"I've got a simple little box camera, and it takes better pictures than any of these really complicated, expensive cameras."

This statement and similar ones to the same effect are heard frequently from amateur home photographers, usually grandmothers. It is obviously balderdash, as Grandma's photo album clearly reveals.

The better the camera, the better the pictures, and if you have a good camera and are getting poor pictures, you better check the nut behind the lens.

The once trifling and slightly boring hobby of "shooting pictures" has grown in recent years to a multi-million dollar industry catering to people of all shapes and sizes and the church of their choice. It's still boring.

The camera, for the average shutter-bug, is a lien on immortality and an attempt to capture, on a piece of paper, a face, a moment, an occasion, to freeze it forever against the ravages of time and a faulty memory.

My First Car. The Camping Trip to Maine. The Girl. Our Wedding. Baby's First Christmas. The Divorce Judge. The album of dim, fading photographs is a Pandora's box of memories, mocking mementos of when we were young and slimmer, with fewer worries and more hair.

Although the finished products rarely suggest it, the process known as Taking a Picture is one requiring thought, care, preparation, and what school officials are fond of calling "pre-planning."

At any family gathering, some officious joy-killer (usually Dad) is sure to shout, "Everybody stand by Gramps — I'm going to take your picture!" Then there are screams and shouts as the women rush for lipstick and comb and the men for the brandy decanter.

There are always a few maiden aunts and overworked mothers who say, "Oh, no, you don't want me in the picture. Go ahead and take the others."

Try it sometime. Say okay and line up the rest of them. You'll suddenly find the demure aunt and the reluctant mother squeezing into the middle row, front and center. Or you'll get tears, recriminations and possibly a soggy browny in the back of the neck.

So they all line up in the hot sun, squinting angrily, impatient, slapping at mosquitos and the children. The women giggle, the men fumble with their cigars. Everyone waits . . . and waits . . . and waits.

Now Aunt Mabel has the camera. "All right now, everyone look at me. Smile. "Everyone looks at someone else to see if she's looking at Aunt Mabel.

"Say cheese. Ready now. Oh dear, why are you all leaning? Can't you stand up straight? And I can't get Jimmy and Edna in." She backs away a few steps and is gaffed by a Queen Elizabeth rosebush. "Oh my! Which button do I press? My camera has only one — never mind, I've got it."

She presses the button that opens the back of the camera exposing the film to the sunlight, and the picture, if any, is ruined.

It's really better that way.

Don't fall for arthritis quacks

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband has had rheumatoid arthritis since 1948. He is 50 years old now. The disease stopped him from doing the type of work he was doing. In 1954 to 1959 he went to school. In 1959 he went to work as a bookkeeper and since then he has lost no work due to the arthritis. He is unable to walk very far or use his hands too much without pain and swelling. But he has led a fairly normal life. Now all of a sudden he feels he wants to try every quack thing that comes along. We have always watched his diet and we eat no fried foods, very little sweets. Now an outfit he is talking to is telling him no wheat, oats, milk products (only cream), no pork. But he can have all the eggs he wants. Won't that give him too much cholesterol for his age? He reads your column. If you would be able to write about this he would appreciate it.

I don't mind spending money but all the things he tries never help that much. He is on Darvon Compound 65 now from our family doctor, plus all the Vita Lea, Vit C, alfalfa tablets, calcium tablets and protein from the so-called health group he is involved with.

DEAR READER — Your husband should talk to his family doctor about that health group he is getting advice from. That is not a bona fide medical group. They are in business to sell vitamins and so called health food products. Your husband is only one of the many victims of frauds in the treatment of arthritis. There are plenty of quacks ready to prey on the victims of arthritis. Selling phony cures to arthritis victims is a multimillion dollar business. My best advice to all the arthritics of all types is to never, never, never use any treatment that is not recommended by your doctor. Do not buy anything from door-to-door salesmen or fall for supposed miracle cures.

Vitamins are useful in people who need them but health faddists, not doctors, who have been pushing them for cure of arthritis are really a public health menance. While a person thinks he is getting or is going to get help from vitamins or alfalfa tablets, the joints may be undergoing permanent changes that could have been prevented. There is no evidence that any vitamins ever cured or improved a single case of arthritis. Anyone who tells you otherwise is either ignorant of the facts, has an untrained unscientific mind or may be a quack.

That diet sounds terrible. Certainly consuming a lot of egg yolks can increase the cholesterol intake in the diet and is contrary to the recommendations of the American Heart Assn. in the prevention of heart disease. I am confident he didn't get that diet from a reputable physcians.

I am sending you a copy of The Health Letter number 4-11, Rheumatoid Arthritis. You can find the address there of the nearest Arthritis chapter to get advice on arthritis clinics or where you can get a rheumatologist to supervise your husband's care. The most important thing a patient with rheumatoid arthritis can do is to be carefully followed by such a physician or clinic. There is a lot that can be done for rheumatoid arthritis and the status is summarized in that issue. Others who want this information can send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing and 50 cents for it. Send your letter to me in care of this newspaper, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

All today's three-notrump contract requires is a little care. Without this modicum of care, declarer will make just eight tricks and will be entitled to just a little bit of complaint about bad luck.

With a little care in the play he will take his nine tricks and be ready for the next rubber.

South ducks the first heart, but wins the heart continuation. Then he starts happily after the nice diamond suit. If he is careless he leads to dummy's king and back to his queen. East shows out and our careless hero has fallen. He must now take the third diamond with dummy's ace and the fourth diamond traps him in his hand with no way to get to dummy's fifth diamond.

The suit blocks. He can't score five diamond tricks and has to fall back on a spade finesse. The finesse loses and West cashes three more heart tricks.

A careful declarer plays his queen of diamonds first and continues with a diamond to dummy's king. East shows out whereupon South simply leads one of dummy's hearts and chucks a diamond. West takes his heart tricks, but that only gives the defense four tricks and South picks up the rest.

Laser beams remove tattoos

Maybe you've read that some doctors are using laser beams to check glaucoma hemorrhages, to burn out cancers, and to execute other precise surgeries in ailing human bodies. But did you know such laser beams now also are being used to get rid of unwanted tattoos?

Already pointed out the curiosity of those words "ravel" and "unravel" which mean the same. How many other similar synonyms can you come up with? Start with "flammable" and "inflammable." Add "regardless" and "irregardless." What, you say "irregardless" is not a word? It's in the dictionary.

QUERIES FROM CLIENTS

A. He finds no earlier reference than the one in Mr. Shakespeare's "Othello".

That's the scream of a tree trunk, sometimes heard across the woods of a winter night, when freezing moisture expands to crack open the trunk. Incidentally, oftentimes a tree that's ripped apart like that in the night will mend itself in the morning as you can't even see the wound. Remarkable.

Grant from HEW

Mental health clinic for Glendora

Foothill Community Psychiatric Clinic, a nonprofit mental health care center in Glendora, has been awarded a $428,113 construction grant from the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare to build a community mental health center.

The proposed $1.5 million mental health facility will be constructed in Glendora. Additional funds will be provided through a fund-raising campaign and a mortgage.

The clinic is presently located in leased offices at 122 W. Alosta Ave., Glendora, and provides bilingual therapy for over 500 clients a month.

According to Richard L. Johnson, administrator, the new 14,500-square-foot structure will expand the center's presently overcrowded facilities by 300 per cent and enable a greater variety of therapies and research to be accomplished.

As a federally designated community mental health center, the clinic will seek to provide extensive consultation to school districts, churches and other clinics, Johnson said.

The proposed one-story building will house specialized facilities for outpatient, day care and rehabilitation services, as well as administrative services. Inpatient services will be provided in conjunction with existing public and private psychiatric hospitals.

Ford proposes payment disclosure legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a move to prevent American firms from making questionable and illegal expenditures abroad, President Ford proposed legislation today to require U.S. corporations to disclose payments to foreign officials.

Ford said the legislation would require the companies to file reports with the government on a wide range of payments, and also would require identification of recipients of the money.

The President said the measure "will contribute significantly to the deterrence of future improper practices and to the restoration of confidence in American business standards."

The Securities and Exchange Commission has disclosed that at least 100 U.S. corporations have made questionable or illeal payments abroad. Ford said the figure is relatively small but that "it is clear that the questionable payments problem must be taken seriously."

Ford said the legislation, called the Foreign Payments Disclosure Act, is based on recommendations from a task force he established March 31 under the direction of Commerce Secretary Elliot Richardson.

"The legislation will requiring reporting to the secretary of Commerce of certain classes of payments made by U.S. businesses and their foreign subsidiaries and affiliates in relation to business with foreign governments," Ford said in a message to Congress.

He said the legislation covers payments which are made to foreign government employes or representatives with the hope of obtaining or maintaining business or influencing the conduct of the foreign government. Also covered are political contributions.

"By requiring reporting of all signficant payments, whether proper or improper ... the legislation will avoid the difficult problems of definition and proof that arise in the context of enforcement of legislation that seeks to deal specifically with bribery or extortion abroad," Ford said.

The President said that small, routine payments will be excluded, "as will certain clearly bona fide payments such as taxes."

Under the proposed legislation, enforcement powers for the law would be granted to the executive branch.

Reports would be made available to the departments of State and Justice and to the Internal Revenue Service and the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The Justice and State departments would relay information to foreign authorities when warranted to help them in enforcement of their own laws, Ford said.

The reports also would be made available to appropriate congressional committees, he said, and would be made available to the public one year after filing, except in cases where the secretary of state or attorney general find that matters of foreign policy or judicial process should prevent disclosure.

Ford said that questionable and illegal payents are an international problem which cannot be corrected by the United States alone.

"Consequently, we are continuing our efforts to secure an international agreement which will establish a mutually acceptable framework for international cooperation in eliminating improper business practices," he said.

Policies aimed at stronger family ties —Carter

MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP) — Declaring that the American family is in serious trouble, Jimmy Carter pledged today to chart a profamily policy if elected president.

Current Republican administration policies "have actually weakened our families or even destroyed them," the Democratic nominee charged.

Carter's remarks came in a prepared version of a speech to a rally in a downtown shopping center here, the first formal speech he delivered since the week of the Democratic convention in New York.

The candidate's foray from his home town of Plains, Ga., to the state that gave him his first presidential primary victory also was to include an appearance at a state Democratic fund-raiser tonight.

Ticking off high rates of divorce, illegitimate births, juvenile delinquency and suicide, venereal disease and drug abuse, Carter said that "the breakdown of the American family has reached extremely dangerous proportions."

"There can be no more urgent priority for the next administration than to see that every decision our government makes is designed to honor and support and strengthen the American family," he said.

Economics, welfare, tax and urban renewal policies under President Richard M. Nixon and President Ford helped to undermine the family by failing to consider the human consequences, Carter added.

As president, he said, he would require that every new federal program offer an analysis of how it would affect the family.

He added that he has named Joseph A. Califano Jr., a former aide to the late President Lyndon B. Johnson, as special adviser "on how federal programs can aid and support the American family."

Among the programs which he would adopt to strengthen the family, Carter said, would be a "comprehensive program of family planning, which would include adoptions and education and moral leadership, and would do everything possible to prevent the need for abortions."

Carter's restatement of his positions that government should do what it can to discourage abortions was seen as an attempt to counter recent criticism by Roman Catholic clergymen of his abortion stand. Carter has said he opposes a constitutional amendment to outlaw abortion, although he is personally against abortion.

In order to maintain bearing and balance in its underwater environment, American lobsters insert a grain of sand near the base of each feeler. National Geographic says the grains serve as a kind of plumb line for the curstacean, since gravity exerts faint but constant pull on them.

DESTRUCTION DERBY — L.A. County Sheriff Peter Pitchess empties a carton of confiscated handguns onto a pile of nearly six tons of firearms and deadly weapons used during crimes in county within the past year. The guns will be stripped and hammered into useless pieces of metal and later melted down and later used in a memorial sculpture.

State drug traffic increasing, but law enforcement resources lagging

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Drug trafficking is getting worse in California, but enforcement resources aren't much greater than they were "in the firestorm days of 1968," says a legislative subcommittee.

The Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on Narcotics Trafficking said in its report, issued Monday, that the federal government has been slow in responding to the problem. It added that federal efforts, although improved, are still inadequate.

It said the state government "has virtually ignored the need to respond at all."

The subcommmittee is chaired by Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach. It investigated drug trafficking for seven months.

Deukmejian issued a statement saying he agrees with Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post, "that we can no longer afford to ignore the drug trafficking problem in California."

The report calls for new legislation, including 17 bills already introduced. It also calls for major policy changes by the executive branch, and new administrative actions at the federal, state and local levels, Deukmejian said.

The report concludes that heroin is still the most serious crime and health problem, but the most dramatic increase in trafficking has been in cocaine and marijuana.

It says California is still "both a major terminal market and a prime transhipment point for criminal drug trafficking activity worldwide."

The subcommittee says a special state executive task force should be created to develop a "state strategy" for the prevention of drug traffic and abuse."

The worst "firestorm" years of drug trafficking were 1968 through 1971, the report said. But "despite the highly dedicated efforts of law enforcement officers, trafficking today...continues at levels equal to, or higher than" that period.

Among 32 conclusions of the subcommittee:

—California is particularly vulnerable because of its numerous airports, seaports, military debarkation points, trade contacts, major population centers, and proximity to Mexico.

—The manufacture of synthetic drugs in clandestine laboratories is growing.

—The combined resources of state and local enforcement agencies "are clearly inadequate."

—The federal effort is overburdened by the illegal immigration problem, especially between the coast and Otay Mountain in San Diego County "where a reported 1,200 to 1,500 illegal crossings have occurred during a single 24-hour period."

—Cooperation between enforcement and public health officials "is unacceptably weak, if not generally non-existent."

—Federal, state and local agents sometimes get bogged down competing over potential "big cases."

—Further "decriminalization" will cause an increase, rather than a decrease, in the use and demand.

—The governments of California and Arizona should develop bi-state enforcement, and consider convening a border states conference to include New Mexico and Texas.

New consumer hotline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Buying a used car? The federal government says it's come up with a new way to help avoid some unnecessary headaches.

"Basically, we can tell a guy whether his car is one of the 15 million or so on the road that have been the subject of a manufacturer's recall and never had the safety defect corrected," Gil Watson said of the government's newest consumer hotline.

The hotline is manned by a team of operators from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. EDT. At other times, a tape recorder will take a message and the hotline staff will return the call. The hotline number is 800-424-9393.

Watson, chief of consumer services for the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, said the experimental hotline is a two-way avenue of communications.

"We can tell a guy if his car make and model has been involved in a recall and how he can go about checking to see if his car was repaired by the manufacturer," Watson said.

"By car owners calling in with trouble they suspect to be manufacturer defects we can see if a potential manufactured-in problem raises its head," he said.

Ralph Nader doesn't always practice what he preaches

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Ralph Nader is a one-man conglomerate.

Like the government agencies and huge corporations he criticizes, Nader wields enormous influence on American life through a maze of interlocking organizations.

He does not always practice what he preaches. The same man who urges openness in government and business, defends secrecy in his own operation.

The organizations directly linked to Nader are small: less than a dozen groups with about 100 employes and an annual budget probably under $2 million.

(It is impossible to determine the exact size of the budget for all the Nader organizations because he funds some of them out of his personal earnings and refuses to disclose how much he spends. He also refuses to disclose how much money he makes; most estimates are in the range of $250,000 a year.)

Nader's indirect influence is difficult to measure. Groups which are technically independent have been founded by former Nader employes. Or they have received funds from Nader organizations. Or they have joined forces with Nader units for specific campaigns.

"We share common goals and ideas," said Nader when asked about his influence on some technically independent groups, including state and local Public Interest Research Groups — PIRGs — comprised mainly of students. (The PIRGs have a membership of over half a million persons and annual revenues of over $1.4 million.)

Pressed for specifics about his influence, if any, Nader avoided a direct answer. "There's nothing ominous about influence," he said, making a distinction between his influence over citizen groups and the influence of a large corporation over a government official.

It is the sort of distinction Nader makes frequently. He draws a line between what he will and will not disclose, both personally and financially. Corporation secrecy becomes Nader's right to privacy.

Nader himself can be hard to reach. He often ignores phone messages, returning calls only when he has a point he wants to get across. Once he knows you, however, he can be charming and responsive.

He sometimes answers criticism by attacking the critic rather than responding to the substance of the charge. He refuses to allow interviews to be tape recorded.

While Nader gives some of his organizations a measure of independence, he remains clearly in charge. His personal eccentricities and life-style — the long hours, the passion for privacy — stamp the output of those who work with him.

SECOND in a SERIES

Lowell Dodge, former director of the Center for Auto Safety — one of those technically independent groups with which Nader worked closely — described the various units as "organizations on the end of the arms of a ferris wheel with Nader at the center."

David Sanford, author of a book critical of Nader, says Nader's organization "has become so large and diverse and bureaucratic that it resembles the divisions of General Motors..."

Nonsense, said Nader. "The whole list (of organizations) is smaller than many Chevrolet dealerships."

(Nader is right — in dollars and cents terms, at least, since the National Automobile Dealers Association estimated that the average Chevrolet dealership had gross sales of about $3.1 million in 1975.)

The Nader groups lack many of the trappings of bureaucracy. There are no organization tables, no structural hierarchy.

The Nader operation "was a series of many personal relationships," recalls John Esposito, a lawyer who worked at the center in its earliest days. "There were occasional attempts to be more efficient. It just didn't happen very much," he said.

The best way to try to trace Nader's organization is to start at the beginning.

Nader gained public attention just over a decade ago, with "Unsafe at Any Speed," critical of General Motors' Corvair. The impact was magnified by the disclosure that GM hired a private detective to investigate his personal life to try to discredit his charges.

(Nader sued GM for invasion of privacy and the eventual settlement of the suit provided some of the money to finance later campaigns.)

The first Nader organization was the Center for Study of Responsive Law, set up in 1969 as a tax-exempt group, funded by foundations. Its purpose, Nader said, was "to conduct research into violations of the public interest by business and governmental groups."

The center has an annual budget of $250,000 to $300,000, Nader said. A big part of its current money comes from a three-year, $317,000 Carnegie Foundation grant which expires at the end of 1976.

With the help of summer interns known as Nader's Raiders, the center was responsible for a series of reports about government and industry, including "The Chemical Feast," "The Interstate Commerce Omission," "Vanishing Air" and "The Closed Enterprise System."

In 1972, the Freedom of Information Clearinghouse was organized as part of the center to help win release of government-held documents under the Freedom of Information Act.

The importance of the center has waned as Nader shifted his focus from research to action. It remains his base of operations, however, and Nader has his offices in the center.

The Center for Study of Responsive Law is not listed in the telephone book, although you can get the number from information.

Staff members say listing the address would result in a deluge of visitors. The policy is nothing new. Esposito, who left Nader in 1971 and is now counsel to the New York State Consumer Protection Board, said that even in the early days of the center, "People had the idea that Ralph was some sort of public utility that everyone could tap into ... We didn't want people wandering in with complaints."

The major Nader operation today is Public Citizen, Inc., a fund-raising umbrella group established in 1971. Unlike the center, Public Citizen is not tax exempt and therefore is allowed to lobby.

The tax filings of Public Citizen — how much money is raised and what it is spent on — are a matter of public record. The names of contributors are not. Nader said he does not disclose the names "because we don't want them (contributors) exploited commercially or harassed. Beyond what the law requires us to do, we have the right to protect our contributors."

Public Citizen supports six Nader groups: the Litigation Group, the Health Research Group, the Citizen Action Group, the Tax Reform Research Group, Congress Watch and the Public Citizen Visitors Center. Public Citizen also makes contributions to some technically independent groups such as the Aviation Consumer Action Project.

The relationship between Nader and the aviation project illustrates the difficulty of trying to pinpoint the structure of the Nader organization.

Nader describes the project as "an independent educational group." At the same time, he says, it gets 80 per cent of its funds from Public Citizen. When Nader was bumped from a 1972 Allegheny Airlines flight because of overbooking, the Aviation Project — represented in court by Nader's Litigation Group — successfully took up his cause. Nader ultimately was awarded $25,000 in damages and the Supreme Court ruled that a passenger who is bumped can sue for damage in the federal courts.

In 1974, the latest year for which complete figures are available, Public Citizen raised a little more than $1.1 million, up slightly from the year before. The cost of direct mail appeals to raise the money was $338,430. Administrative expenses for the staff of Public Citizen itself were $48,229. The amount raised in 1975, said Nader, was just about the same "give or take 4 or 5 per cent either way." Nader said the final report was not complete because the group's accountant was on vacation.

Here is a look at the six groups and their 1974 budgets. (The major change from 1974 to 1975 was an increase of about 50 per cent in the amount received by the litigation group, Nader said.)

Litigation Group: $129,828. The legal arm of Nader's operation. Headed by Alan Morrison, it has seven full-time and two part-time lawyers. The group has been a party in over 100 cases involving anticompetitive industry practices, health and safety issues and government accountability. Morrison reports to Nader once a month with a formal summary of what the group is doing.

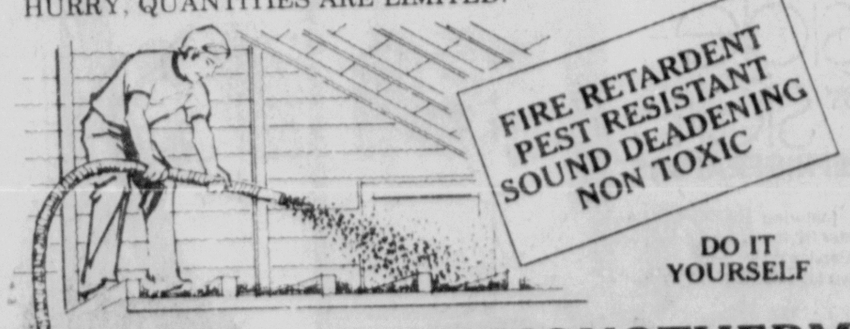

Health Research Group: $136,596. Focuses on health care, food and drug safety and occupational health and safety. Headed by Dr. Sidney Wolfe, the group has a staff of nine, including three attorneys. It has studied issues ranging from Red Dye No. 2 to black lung disease.

Congress Watch: $126,824. Nader's lobbying arm. The group is headed by Joan Claybrook and provides congressmen with research, technical analyses and legislative drafting services. It has lobbied for establishment of an independent consumer protection agency — still pending in Congress — for creation of a federal bank to loan money to consumer cooperatives.

Tax Reform Research Group: $72,374. The group works to reform the tax laws and its lobbying in the House Ways and Means Committee last year was credited with being instrumental in elimination of oil depletion allowances. It also publishes a newsletter, "People and Taxes" and puts out "consciousness - raising reports." Among recent studies was a survey of property tax assessments in 67 cities.

SQUARE BURGERS

Your little athletes will love these banana treats

What can championship marathon runners tell us about the importance of high carbohydrate foods for high energy? Plenty — and it's right out of their own experience. It may be the difference between winning and losing a race in this championship year of athletic games.

In a series of careful studies, marathon runners ate a high protein, high fat diet two weeks before a major race and then a high carbohydrate diet the last week before the race. Those who ate the high carbohydrate diet showed more stamina in the final miles of the race. The high glycogen in the muscle tissue contributed by the carbohydrate diet sustained them for the last extra spurt needed by long distance runners.

Many medical doctors are now recommending more natural carbohydrate foods in the diet of all active people. They point out that the most effective way to create laboratory fatigue is to put a human being on a low carbohydrate diet. Extensive research with human subjects by Dr.s Walter L. Bloom and Gordon J. Azar showed that after two days on a carbohydrate-free diet, the subjects complained of fatigue, and after the third day, they did not feel that they had enough energy to continue normal activity. The fatigue disappeared promptly after the addition of carbohydrates to the diet.

These are important insights for the active little athletes in your family, from the smallest youngster right through to teen agers as well as adults. Active as they are, they need high energy snacks. And we have some excellent ones for you made with bananas, a natural carbohydrate food.

The Banana Bunch, industry-sponsored center for consumer information, believes that you will appreciate, too, what a good value bananas are in the market, often the least expensive fresh fruit in the produce department.

A neat to eat food in themselves, they can also be the main ingredient in gold medal recipes for the whole family. Banana Oat Bars are a lower-cost, high energy snack that everybody in the family will enjoy but especially those athletic kids, whether they are champions or not. A delicious high carbohydrate snack is Banana Malt — soda fountain fun — but with a really high energy value to give tired athletes a quick lift.

BANANA OAT BARS

- ¾ cup soft butter or margarine
- 1 cup packed dark brown sugar
- 1 egg
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1½ cups mashed ripe bananas (about 5 medium)
- 4 cups uncooked regular oats
- 1 cup raisins
- ½ cup chopped walnuts

In large bowl cream butter and sugar until light and fluffy. Beat in egg, salt and bananas. Stir in remaining ingredients. Turn into greased 13 x 9 x 2-inch baking pan. Bake in 350 degree F. oven 1 hour, or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean. Cool completely. Cut into 2 x 1-inch bars.

YIELD: 58 bars.

BANANA MALT

- 2 ripe bananas
- 2 cups milk
- 2 tablespoons malted milk powder
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- ½ cup vanilla ice cream

Peel bananas, cut into chunks and place in electric blender container. Add remaining ingredients. Cover and process until smooth.

YIELD: 2 servings.

Barbeque idea

Zesty burger has middle-east flavor

Who says there isn't anything new under the sun? How about a square hamburger, right in your own backyard. Save money, too, by combining a canned spaghetti sauce with meat and some spices and fruits to make a terrific mid-eastern barbecue sauce. This zippy sauce goes inside and outside the hamburger. Put the whole unique idea on toasted cheese bread.

SPICY MID-EAST BARBECUE SAUCE

- 1 can (15 oz.) spaghetti sauce with meat
- 3 tablespoons cider vinegar
- 3 tablespoons orange juice
- 2 tablespoons raisins
- dash cinnamon
- dash nutmeg
- dash ginger
- 1 tablespoon dehydrated onion
- 1 teaspoon lemon rind
- ¼ teaspoon hot pepper sauce

Combine all ingredients in small saucepan. Cover; simmer for 10 minutes. Let stand overnight.

SPICY SQUARE HAMBURGERS

- 1 pound ground hamburger
- 8 to 12 slices bread
- 4 to 6 slices American cheese

Combine ground hamburger with one-fourth cup spicy barbecue sauce. Divide into 4 to 6 portions. Form into squares. Broil 6" from charcoal, baste with spicy sauce. Toast bread on both sides; add slice of cheese. When hamburgers are finished, place on toasted cheese bread. Serves 6 to 8.

Try this luscious dairy-berry topping

There are some deliciously quick-and-easy ways to use fresh blueberries for summertime desserts by teaming them with cool and refreshing foods from dairies.

One of the best of these speedy desserts is made by topping fresh blueberries with brown sugar (light or dark) or crushed maple sugar and yogurt or sour cream. You can serve the sour cream "as is" or whipped. The advantage of whipping sour cream is that it almost doubles in volume, thus stretching servings and calories.

Most dairy sour cream can be whipped. Standard directions call for chilling bowl and beaters, but I have never found this necessary. I have had good success in whipping one-half pint of very cold sour cream by using an electric beater at high speed; during the first part of the beating and in about five minutes it forms soft peaks. It will not be as stiff as whipped sweet cream.

If calories are on your mind, you may want to top the blueberries with ersatz sour cream. To concoct it, whirl a half-pint of small-curd, cream-style cottage cheese in an electric blender with a couple of tablespoons of milk or buttermilk until smooth and fluffy. Chill, tightly covered, to allow it to "set" before serving. A delectable and easy way to serve blueberries to guests is to marinate two cups of them in one-quarter-cup orange-flavor liqueur and refrigerate, stirring several times, for about eight hours. Then drain the berries well and fold them into a pint of slightly softened honey ice cream. This combination may be served in sherbet glasses or cantaloupe halves, or atop white or yellow cake made from scratch or a mix.

Another way to use the berries marinated in the orange-flavor liqueur is to fold them into whipped cream. For two cups berries marinated in one-quarter cup liqueur, use a halfpint of heavy cream whipped and sweetened with two tablespoons (or more) of superfine sugar.

Sherried pears an elegant dish

This make-ahead dessert, "Sherried Pear Cream," will be a pleasant surprise for those who are not especially fond of rice pudding. While it is basically just that — a rice pudding — it is glorified by the additon of fresh California Bartlett pears and a dash of sherry which lift it high above the ordinary. Test the Bartletts between your palm, with a very gentle squeeze, and select those that are ripe, but firm. Carefully pare and core the pears and cut them into large, succulent cubes to fold into the tender pudding mixture just before serving. The rice, cooked in pear nectar and sherry, is already something special. With fresh California Bartlett pears tucked in and under, it's irresistible.

SHERRIED PEAR CREAM

- 1 can (12 ox.) pear nectar (1½ cups)
- 1 cup water
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- 1 (2-inch) stick cinnamon
- 3 tablespoons sugar
- ½ cup raw regular rice
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 2 tablespoons sherry
- 2 medium fresh California Bartlett pears
- 1 cup whipping cream

Heat nectar, water, salt, cinnamon and 2 tablespoons sugar to boiling. Stir in rice. Cover, turn heat low and simmer 30 minutes, or until rice is tender. Remove from heat. Stir in lemon juice and sherry. Excess liquid will be absorbed as rice cools. Chill. Pare and core pears; cut in ½-inch cubes to measure 1½ cups. Beat cream with remaining tablespoon sugar. Fold pears and ¾ of the cream into chilled rice. Top with remaining cream when served. Makes 6 servings (a generous quart).

Wheat germ and fruit make a dandy duo

Wheat germ and fruit are a dandy duo for quick and wholesome snack ideas. In fact, if you've ever sprinkled toasty wheat germ straight from the jar over fresh berries or sliced peaches, oranges or pineapple you know what a tasty treat it is! The crunchy nutty tasting flakes of wheat germ and the cool juiciness of the fruit make a delicious mouthful. It's no wonder that this great combination of natural foods inspired the creative consumer specialists to come up with some fruitful new recipes.

For years muffins made with wheat germ have been a very popular quick bread. Our newest version is done with fresh peaches or nectarines. The muffins are extra moist and have a light fruity flavor. For speed and convenience, the fruit is added to the batter chopped but unpeeled. After all the skins contain good nutrients too so why waste them! Full of other healthful foods like regular wheat germ, fresh milk, butter and an egg, these muffins make for wholesome snacking indeed. Blender drinks whizzed up with wheat germ and fruit make great sippable snacks. The one shown here is a crushed pineapple, vanilla ice cream, wheat germ and milk, super satisfying pick me up. Whir it with cracked ice for extra chilly refreshment. It goes down so smoothly you'll be tempted to have it for breakfast and lunch as well as at snacktime.

Wheat germ is mixable and matchable with so many different types of foods. All kinds of recipes — including old favorites — easily becoming something special and nutritious with wheat germ. After opening the vacuum packed jars, close the screw top tightly and keep refrigerated.

Almond apple cookies

Almond-Applesauce Cookies, spicy and moist, are drop cookies chock-full of chopped almonds and chocolate chips. We used unsweetened applesauce in our recipe; however, if it's not readily available, you may substitute sweetened applesauce and reduce the sugar by ¼ cup.

ALMOND-APPLESAUCE COOKIES

- ½ cup butter or margrine
- 1¼ cups sugar
- 2 eggs
- 1 cup unsweetened applesauce
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 2½ cups flour
- 1½ teaspoons ground allspice or ½ teaspoon each ground nutmeg, cinnamon and cloves
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¾ cup chocolate chips
- ¾ cup coarsely chopped almonds

Cream butter and sugar until well blended; beat in eggs. Mix applesauce with soda and stir into creamed mixture. Combine flour, spices, salt, chocolate chips and almonds. Add to batter and mix thoroughly. Drop by teaspoonfuls onto well-greased cookie sheet about 1-inch apart. Bake at 375 degrees 12 minutes. Makes about 6 dozen cookies.

For natural foods fans, here's a new version of an old favorite, potato cake. This recipe, Almond-Potato Cake, includes stone-ground whole wheat flour, chopped almonds, low fat dry milk, brown sugar, spices and chocolate. Instant potato flakes speed the preparation.

This is a moist, rich and slightly heavy cake. Long-keeping, it's ideal to take on excursions in the great outdoors.

For a patio party, you might like to dress up the cake with a simple powdered sugar icing.

ALMOND-POTATO CAKE

- 1 cup butter or margarine
- 2 cups brown sugar
- 4 eggs
- 1½ cups lukewarm water
- 3 cups stone-ground whole wheat flour
- 1/3 cup instant potato flakes
- 1/3 cup instant dry milk powder
- ½ teaspoon each ground cloves, nutmeg and cinnamon
- ¼ cup instant cocoa or all-purpose ground chocolate and cocoa
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 cup coarsely chopped natural (unblanched) almonds

Cream butter and brown sugar, then beat in eggs and lukewarm water. Combine flour, potato flakes, dry milk, spices, chocolate and baking powder. Mix into batter; stir in chopped almonds. Pour into a well-greased 9 x 12-inch baking pan; bake at 325 degrees 1 hour. Cool. If you wish, sprinkle with sieved powdered sugar or frost with light glaze.

Mexican style

Fix tuna salad this spicy, different way

Foreign-kissed foods seem to have special appeal for American tastes. The trend toward ethnic cooking could be a simple explanation. A happy potpourri of foods that we love may be another.

From south of the border comes a variety of dishes that we accept and enjoy immediately. We know the Mexican touch and we like the blending of seasonings, both hot and mild. Mexican Style Tuna Salad suggests that tuna, a canned food popular by all American standards, be combined with seasonings, shredded lettuce, thin wedges of tomato, avocado slices and shredded Cheddar cheese for a Mexican entree that makes a Sunday night or a backyard supper into something very, very special. With corn chips on the side as an added attraction, this is a dish that inspires oles!

Though Mexican Style Tuna Salad is a hearty but casual dish, a party hostess who has pizzaz will invite guests to the patio or picnic table. There she stretches a serape for a table covering and sets a sombrero out as a centerpiece and she has the makings of a festive summer evening party. If she has Mexican serving dishes bought on a trip, they, too, add atmosphere. Music, softly played in the background, gives the party a Mexican flavor that's very true when held outside in summer twilight.

The salad, prepared earlier in the afternoon and allowed to chill in the refrigerator, is not only good tasting but contains good nutrition as a bonus. High in protein and low in saturated fats, fish and seafoods are low in calories as well.

Ole! If the salad is Mexican, it's bound to be good. Try it and see!

MEXICAN STYLE TUNA SALAD

2 cans 6½ or 7 ounce each) tuna
2 cups finely chopped onion
1 large clove garlic, minced
¼ cup cooking oil
2 cans (8 ounce each) tomato sauce
1 cup water
3 teaspoons chili powder
1 teaspoon oregano
½ teaspoon hot pepper sauce
1 medium head lettuce, shredded
1 medium tomato, cut in thin wedges
1 medium avocado, peeled and sliced
½ cup shredded Cheddar cheese
1 bag (10 ounce) corn chips

Drain tuna and break into chunks. Cook onion and garlic in oil until tender, not brown. Add tomato sauce, water, chili powder, oregano, salt and pepper sauce; simmer uncovered about 15 minutes to blend flavors. Add tuna; allow to heat through. Arrange lettuce on individual salad plates or large salad bowl. Spoon hot tuna mixture into center; garnish with tomato wedges and avocado slices. Serve with cheese and corn chips. Makes 6 servings.

MEXICAN TUNA SALAD

RAGA MUFFINS — Take 3 English muffins, split and lightly toasted, spread with peanut butter. Cover each half with ½ a banana, sliced. Brush with meted butter and sprinkle with lemon juice, a little salt and confectioner's sugar. Bake on cookie sheet or flat pan in moderate (350 degree) oven for 15 to 18 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

Chocolate is literally out of this world

Chocolate is really out of this world. Matter of fact it has gone to the moon with astronauts in the National Aeronautics and Space Administration program. But the heavens are no boundary for chocolate.

Chocolate was much in evidence at the Olympic Village in Montreal this July. In keeping with a pledge to the participants from 131 countries, that the daily menus "would include national favorites," Dorothy Shantz, executive dietitian for VS Services Ltd., Toronto, ARA Services' Canadian affiliate, has included a variety of chocolate items for the athletes.

Beverage choices at every meal included chocolate drink and cocoa; chocolate cake with fudge frosting and chocolate ice cream were standard dessert items. For those competing at sites away from the Village, there were box lunches with canned chocolate pudding as dessert. And to provide nourishing between-meal snacks, Miss Shantz has included both chocolate milk and chocolate milk shakes.

And it will be one of the food staples on the space shuttle. According to Dr. Malcolm Smith, chief of food nutrition at NASA's Lyndon B. Johnson Space Center in Houston, Texas, chocolate is used in space for the same reasons it's used on earth. It's a great tasting, pleasure food that everyone enjoys.

Specially packaged in containers made of aclar, polyethylene, and mylar, a high-melting-point chocolate was included in the space menus of 25 flights in the Apollo, Gemini, Soyuz and Skylab projects. Chocolate pudding was another popular dessert requested by the astronauts who started their days with a nourishing, chocolate instant breakfast drink.

As Dr. Smith said: "it's extremely important that we give men something they like. Not because we want to cater to them, but because it's very important to our experiment."

And that sentiment was echoed by three Russian researchers in an article in Space World on "What Soviet Spacemen Eat." "Sweets are popular among the cosmonauts," they reported. "Heat-resistant chocolates, chocolate bonbons with nuts and various types of cookies have been included in the diet. The Soviet chocolate industry supplied the chocolates in bite-size portions in polymer film."

As a morale booster, chocolate is enjoyed by professional dancers as well as athletes, who require nourishment in a snap.

Chocolate disproves the popular misconception that "if something tastes so good it's probably bad for you." Not so with chocolate. Certainly too much of any one food is not good for anyone, but in normal amounts chocolate provides nutrients our bodies require daily.

It may come as a surprise but two ounces of milk chocolate have nearly the same amount of iron as two ounces of raisins. Milk chocolate is also a good source of potassium, phosphate, calcium and other matierals. In addition it provides measurable amounts of vitamin A and vitamin D.

During World War II, chocolate, issued in C-rations, was a favorite of soldiers on battlefields. Because chocolate gave appetite satisfaction, the Army considered four ounces of chocolate an emergency meal. In fact, the Government recognized chocolate's contribution to the nourishment and morale of the Armed Forces to such an extent that it allocated valuable shipping space for importing cocoa beans. And the domestic chocolate manufacturing industry responded by setting aside a portion of its production for the GI's.

The Chocolate Manufacturers Association of the U.S.A. tells us another nice thing about chocolate — it's a natural food, made from the bean of the cocoa plant. To this natural substance are added more natural products such as milk, to produce the finished chocolate.

A staggering 3,500,000 pounds of milk are used daily in the U.S. to produce milk chocolate. Sugar, an important source of food energy when used in moderation, is another natural substance that plays a role in the manufacture of chocolate.

And there's even more good news. In a study conducted at the Eastman Dental Center, Rochester, New York, milk chocolate and chocolate chip cookies were found to be snack foods that least contribute to dental decay. This is thought to be partially attributable to the natural fat content of milk chocolate which helps it to clear the mouth faster than other candies.

Meat tips...

tein and other nutrients needed to build strong, sturdy muscles, other body tissues and blood. It also promotes growth and helps build resistance to infection and provides energy for the active children.

When a child reaches 1 year he has usually made the transition from strained meats to solid meats and is enjoying most of the regular family foods. But for the small ones, it is important that the seasonings be kept mild and that the meat is served ground or cut up in bite-size portions so it can be eaten easily. Meats that particularly appeal to young tots are meat loaf and meat patties, frankfurters, lean tender meats, crisp bacon, meat soups and stews and meat spreads.

One of the keys to being a good cook is being able to interpret recipes accurately. To do this, it is essential to understand the wide variety of cooking terms used. The following definitions from the National Live Stock and Meat Board will help clarify some of the terms frequently used in meat recipes.

BASTE — To moisten meat while cooking to add flavor and to prevent drying of the surface. The liquid is usually melted fat, meat drippings, fruit juice or a spicy sauce.

BREAD — To coat with bread or cracker or cereal crumbs, or to coat with crumbs, then with diluted slightly beaten eggs or milk, and again with crumbs.

DREDGE — To sprinkle or coat with flour or other fine substance.

MARINATE — To let food stand in a marinade which is a seasoned liquid frequently having an acid such as diluted vinegar, lemon or pineapple juice, with or without oil. It can have a tenderizing effect.

The popular teenage diet of cheeseburger, French fried potatoes and a milkshake is not as nutritionally unsound as many believe. While it is not suggested that this fast food menu be a steady diet for the teenager, there is no harm if it is eaten occasionally, even once a day. The National Live Sotck and Meat Board points out that the beef-centered meal provides high quality protein, carbohydrates and fat. Many essential vitamins and minerals are present, too. It is advised that this meal be just a part of a daily food plan balanced around the Basic Four Food Groups — meat, milk, fruits and vegetables and breads and cereals.

For children, there's no significant importance between levels of cholesterol in their blood and what they eat. The National Live Stock and Meat Board states a recent Mayo Clinic study that reveals some of the children studied who ate less cholesterol had higher cholesterol levels in their blood than did those who ate foods high in cholesterol. The study also indicated that an individual's blood cholesterol is strongly influenced by genetic background but the incidence rate is not known.

When can you refreeze meats? According to the National Live Stock and Meat Board, although it is not recommended as a routine procedure, it is generally safe to refreeze frozen meats that have remained very cold and have not completely thawed. This refreezing may, however, cause a drop in quality. The refrozen meat should be used as soon as possible. Do not refreeze if the meat has warmed to room temperature and is completely thawed. If complete thawing has occurred, the meat should be cooked immediately. It can then be frozen, if desired.

The United States Department of Agriculture is preparing to write new regulations covering the labeling of meat products such as hams, sausages and pork chops which have a "smoked" color, aroma and flavor. But before they do, they are surveying consumers to find out what they consider smoked, reports the National Live Stock and Meat Board.

The choices are 1) the use of natural smoke produced by burning wood, 2) the use of natural liquid smoke heated to form a gas, 3) the use of natural liquid smoke transformed into a vapor by mechanical means, 4) the use of natural smoke applied by any means, and 5) the use of artificial smoke flavor applied by any means. The USDA primarily wants to know if consumers assume "smoking" results from burning wood that gives the product a brownish color and unique aroma and flavor. Or do consumers only consider the color, aroma and flavor without regard to the process.

If you punched a time clock in the kitchen, how would the time spent on meal preparation add up? If you are like most homemakers, you spend more time on each meal as you progress through the day, says the National Live Stock and Meat Board.

Have a pop n' go summer with popcorn treats

Summertime and the living ain't all that easy.

The cost thereof keeps crawling upward. If the fish are jumping, its' into somebody else's grocery basket. And those who think the "cotton am high" should get a load of food prices.

It's an especially sorry tune for those trying to keep up with family summer-time snacking needs. At home, or on the road, "light" foods at reasonable costs are necessary to quell dog-day appetites that are at once famished but finicky.

An especially jolly answer is offered by economical and popular pop corn. This happy snack food is "light" in eating characteristics, in calories (53 per cup) and weight, so that it is adaptable to at-home and travel scenes; to whatever state the appetite is in.

Make this a "Pop And Go Summer." Just Pop and pack up some pop corn to be enjoyed now or later; here, there or getting there.

Use a recycled coffee can for longer treks or paper bags for one-day trips to the zoo, beach, park or picnic. If a paper bag is used, and much buttered pop corn is your pleasure, be sure to line the bag with aluminum foil to prevent grease spotting. If a plastic bag, wrap or container is used, be sure the pop corn has been cooled before filling.

If the plan is to pop now and munch later, it is best to start with a good quality pop corn; one that is not only guaranteed to pop but one that is also noted for its hearty good taste.

Yellow hulless pop corn is by far the most popular, but you might want to try a white variety which many think has a finer, mellower flavor and tender texture that will endure travel well.

For flavoring, try an instant buttery seasoning or any number of spice and herb combinations. For the long distance journeys, a carmalized corn cut into bars and wrapped in wax paper or plastic wrap makes a fine travel companion.

Travelers Tarragon Pop Corn

3 quarts popped yellow or white pop corn
2 teaspoons buttery pop corn flavoring
1 teaspoon dried tarragon leaves (or 2 teaspoons fresh tarragon leaves, minced)

To freshly popped pop corn, add buttery flavoring and tarragon. Adjust seasonings to taste. Pack in recycled coffee canister or foiled lined bags for traveling.

Garlic-Cheese Pop Corn

3 quarts popped yellow or white pop corn
¼ cup butter
1 clove garlic, minced
½ cup grated mozzarella or provolone cheese
1 teaspoon mustard powder

Keep freshly popped pop corn in warming oven (220 degrees). In saucepan, melt butter; add garlic, cheese and mustard powder. Over low heat, stir until cheese is melted. Pour over popped pop corn. Return to oven and heat till cheese is golden and thoroughly mixed with pop corn. Pack lightly in recycled coffee canister. Best on one-day trips.

Ginger Fruit Pop Corn

3 quarts popped yellow or white pop corn
¼ cup butter
½ teaspoon ground ginger
½ cup minced dried apricots

Keep freshly popped pop corn in warming oven (220 degrees.) In saucepan combine sugar and next four ingredients. Stirring constantly, cook over low heat until sugar dissolves. Continue cooking without stirring until mixture reaches 265 degrees or until it forms brittle ball in cold water. Remove from heat, add vanilla and stir only to mix. Add dates to pop corn and pour syrup over pop corn in large buttered bowl, using buttered fork to mix until pop corn is thoroughly coated. Wet hands slightly; transfer mixture to cake pan. Smooth out evenly. Chill. Transfer to cutting board and cut into bars with wet knife.

A good cook is worth meeting

By Cecily Brownstone
Associated Press Food Editor

About 20 years ago I met Libby Smith, a young woman from Marblehead, Mass., who gave cooking classes and had written a cookbook. A friend of hers gave a party for her in New York and I was invited. Our paths never crossed again, but I sometimes thought of her because she had cooked the main dish served at the party — a fabulously good fish chowder, the best I had ever tasted. That's something a food editor doesn't forget!

Recently a neighbor of mine told me that her sister-in-law, who lived in Marblehead, had a reputation as a fine cook. When I asked her name, I discovered that Libby Smith was now Libby Alsberg and that she and her husband George publish a food-letter that includes recipes and notes on wine. It's called "The Everyday Gourmet" and it goes to subscribers every two weeks the year round except during July. The Alsbergs describe their publication as "being devoted to eating joyously and economically and at the same time preserving our heritage of fine foods and their preparation for the table."

Libby and George are both in the travel business, as they have been for many years. Libby is now semi-retired; George works full-time. Both of them work on the food-letter, but George's special contribution is the wine notes. Libby says, "George loves me and good food. What could be a more satisfying situation? What is more, he cooks with the hand of an angel."

When I tried Libby's recipe for Zucchini Teacake (made with low-cholesterol peanut oil) from "The Everyday Gourmet," I found it just as wonderfully good in its way as her long-ago fish chowder. Here's my adaptation of the recipe.

ZUCCHINI TEACAKE

3½ cups flour, stirr to aerate before measuring ¾ teaspoon baking powder
1½ teaspoons baking soda
1½ teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
2 cups sugar
1 cup peanut oil
1 teaspoon vanilla
4 large eggs
2 cups grated (medium-fine) zucchini, not pared or packed down
1 cup dried currants, rinsed and drained

Grease six (each 5¾ by 3¼ by 2⅛ inches) or two (each 8½ by 4½ by 2½ inches) loaf pans; or use 3 of the small pans and 1 of the large ones.

On wax paper stir together the flour, baking powder, baking soda, salt and cinnamon.

In a large mixing bowl beat together the sugar, peanut oil and vanilla until combined; thoroughly beat in the eggs one at a time. Stir in the flour mixture in several additions alternately with the zucchini. Stir in the walnuts and currants. Turn into the prepared pans — they will be about 1-2 full.

Bake in a preheated 350 degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 45 minutes for small loaves, 55 to 60 minutes for large loaves. (Loaves will crack on top.) Loosen edges and turn out on wire racks; turn right side up; cool completely.

Poolside lunch

Fancy salad adds zest

Main dish salads are truly "fair weather friends" since fruits and vegetables are at their freshest and in such bountiful supply. Even sun parched appetites awaken heartily to a cool and crunchy salad main dish.

Two new recipes offer two exciting variations on the summer salad theme.

Fancy Fruit Salad is a sher-bet for a summer's day luncheon. Start with your favorite combination of fruits then add a special homemade dressing. An easily stirred together mixture of prepared yellow mustard, lemon sherbet and miniature marshmallows creates a fluffy golden topping to crown your fresh fruits.

Summer Salad Plate is a hearty chef-type salad of crisp greens and cold meat. The zesty dressing is a creamy combination of prepared yellow mustard and cheddar cheese that stirs together more quickly than you can yell, "everybody out of the pool!"

Serve either salad with hot rolls, iced tea or coffee, and frosted cake for a light and relaxing summer luncheon or supper.

FANCY FRUIT SALAD

1 cup (½ pint) lemon sherbet
¼ cup prepared yellow mustard
½ cup miniature marshmallows
4 to 6 cups cut up fresh or canned fruit
Slivered almonds, if desired

Let sherbet soften at room temperature. Add mustard; stir briskly with a fork until smooth. Stir in marshmallows. Serve over fruit and sprinkle with almonds. Makes 1½ cups dressing, enough for 6 to 8 servings.

SUMMER SALAD PLATE WITH GOLDEN CREAM DRESSING

½ cup dairy sour cream
¼ cup prepared yellow mustard
¼ cup mayonnaise
¼ cup half-and-half cream
¼ cup shredded cheddar cheese
¼ teaspoon salt
Salad greens
Strips of roast beef or ham
Wedges of tomato and hard-cooked eggs

Prepare dressing by stirring together sour cream, mustard, mayonnaise, cream, cheese, and salt. For each serving, arrange salad greens on plate and top with meat, tomato, and eggs. Serve with dressing. Makes 1½ cups dressing, enough for 6 servings.

Meat tips for careful cooks

It's the wise cook who is cautious in the kitchen to keep bacterial growth in food checked. The National Live Stock and Meat Board wants that special care must be taken with meats and other low-acid foods for they are more susceptible to bacteria.

To be on the safe side, always keep hands, utensils and cutting boards well scrubbed. Handle foods carefully and as little as possible. Cook or serve food promptly after removing from storage. Serve hot foods hot and cold foods cold, and always refrigerate immediately when the meal is ended.

What makes today's pork different from the pork of 25 years ago? The pork you now enjoy comes from a new meat-type hog that has been bred and fed to produce leaner cuts of meat, explains the National Live Stock and Meat Board. Modern breeding and feeding, coupled with more careful trim of exterior fat by packers and meat retailers, brings a leaner pork to the meat counter.

There's been a change in the federal meat inspection regulations for bockwurst, reports the National Live Stock and Meat Board. Bockwurst can now be made from beef and other meats rather than pork as was once required. The meat species must be identified on the labe, such as "beef bockwurst" or "beef and veal bockwurst."

Meat is important in everyone's diet, but it is especially important for children from 1 to 5 years old because of their rapid growth and development. The meat provides the pro-

Here are some spicy ideas

Electronic ovens have made life a little easier. You no longer need to feel there's just not time to produce an interesting side accompaniment to the main dish or make a "something different" dessert.

"Quick Spiced Pears" can be prepared and baked in just minutes and are versatile enough to be served with a variety of meats. This dish featuring fresh Bartlett pears from California is sweet/sour and the spices bestow a delicate flavor touch. Served as an accompaniment to pork, chicken and even hamburgers, they'll add real zing to many a main meal — or, with just a dab of whipped cream they become a delicious dessert which is light and a real taste treat.

QUICK SPICED PEARS

4 large fresh California Bartlett pears
1/3 cup brown suar (packed)
¼ cup cider vinegar
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon allspice

Halve, pare and core pears. Arrange in glass baking dish. Stir sugar, vinegar and spices together. Drizzle over pears. Cook in electronic oven 8 minutes. Check for doneness. Firm pears may require 2 minutes longer. Remove from oven, turn pears and baste with liquid in dish. Cool before serving. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Note: This recipe to be prepared only in an electronic *microwave) oven.

Delicious Danish luncheon recipes

One of Denmark's great contributions to the world of food is their delicious and eye-appealing, open-faced sandwiches. Their combinations are unlimited and the ease of their preparation makes them popular for both family and guests alike. What a marvelous way for we Americans to vary what, at times, can become a monotonous lunch-time menu.

The Danish word for open-faced sandwiches is Smorrebrod. They are best when made on authentic European-style breads which are always first buttered and then artfully arranged using the main ingredients. They are finally topped with appropriate garnishes and are eaten with a knife and fork.

Pictured are three examples: In the foreground is combination of crisp chicory, shredded ham, asparagus spears, and a garnish of pimientos. This is served on a dark Schwarzwalder rye; on the left side of the platter are egg and tomato slices with a crisp bacon strips arranged on traditional hearth-baked rye; on the right baby shrimp are placed on tasty Bohemian-style pumpernickel bread and topped with a lemon twist and a sprig of parsley. Mock Hollandaise Sauce may be spooned over the shrimp and ham sandwiches for an added touch.

What could be more elegant, yet so quick and easy to prepare? With countless combinations from which to choose, luncheon menus can become exciting, not only when guests are expected, but any day of the week.

COME FOR DESSERT!
Orange Baba Beverage

ORANGE BABA

Adapted from a French recipe.

2 large eggs
Sugar
Grated rind of 2 oranges
¾ cup flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
Juice of 3 large oranges (1 cup)
2 tablespoons light rum

Beat eggs with ¾ cup sugar until thick. Beat in orange rind; gradually and gently beat in the flour, then the baking powder, until combined. Turn into a buttered 5½-cup ring mold (8 by 2¼ inches). Bake in a preheated 400 degree oven until golden-brown and cake comes away from sides of mold — 20 to 25 minutes. (Top of cake will sink in center.) Turn out on a rimmed serving plate; leave bottom side up. Heat the orange juice and ¾ cup sugar until sugar dissolves and mixture is hot; stir in the rum. At short intervals, spoon the hot syrup over the hot cake — some of it will remain in the center of the ring. Serve warm with fresh berries or fresh cut-up fruit piled in the center. Makes 6 or 8 servings.

TUNA POTATO SALAD

Try a nice slice of rice

By Gaynor Maddox

Good news ahead for people who love a slice of bread but for medical reasons cannot indulge in any wheat products. Scientists have developed a new bread made from rice flour.

The rice bread in appearance and taste resembles wheat bread, enough so that a person not knowing the difference might think it was wheat bread.

Food Technologist Kazuko D. Nishita, a researcher at the Western Regional Research Center in Berkeley, Cal., who developed the recipe, explains in more detail:

"The rice bread has a firm crust, much like French bread and inside is slightly moist. It actually tastes better when very fresh or warmed. Yes, I'd say this yeast leavened rice bread has color, flavor and texture similar to conventional breads."

She hopes to get the rice bread on the market soon.

Patients with hypertension, nephritis (inflamed kidneys) and digestive difficulties, for example, would benefit from diets that include rice bread because rice contains low levels of sodium, protein, fat and fiber, and high amounts of easily digested carboyhydrates.

Moreover, celiac victims (people whose small intestines react to certain proteins in wheat, causing pain and malabsorption of nutrients) can safely eat rice bread because rice does not contain these particular proteins. Thus rice bread would provide these people with another food, adding more variety to their diets.

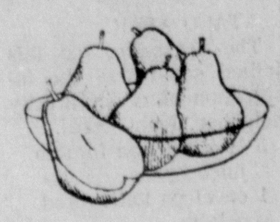

The major problem, according to Miss Nishita, was finding a suitable ingredient that would act as gluten does in wheat bread. Gluten traps the leavening gases produced by the yeast during fermentation, thereby allowing dough to rise.

"We found that a gum (methylcellulose) served as an effective substitute for gluten. It is a white powder resembling flour that is mixed in with the other bread ingredients.

"We are trying to get manufacturers of it to make it available to the general public. We have hopes of persuading one of the large producers of cake and bread mixes to package our rice bread ready-to-bake. That would be a great boon for those who are restricted from wheat bread in their diet," she says.

Dieting? Use fresh California Bartlett pear halves instead of bread to hold sandwich fillings. The juicy pears do away with butter and mayonnaise for further calorie saving. Cut pears in half, core, then fill with cheese, devilled ham, tuna, or chicken or turkey salad.

Tasty watercress has quite a past

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

An ancient Greek pundit once advised "eat more cress and learn wit." This prophet may have been without honor in his own land, but the Romans took him seriously enough to consume quantities of the leafy green with vinegar as a remedy for unbalanced minds.

Today we eat this tasty member of the mustard family as a garnish or ingredient for innumerable dishes from canapes to piecrust. Cress covers such varieties as peppergrass, Rocket and Belle Isle, but the most popular is watercress. It grows profusely in this country wherever there is a damp spot. In fact, it gets its name because it grows in cold running water. As a child I used to watch my mother gather watercress from a rippling brook that meandered through the woods in back of our house.

Pair tuna, potatoes for hearty salad

Which is summer's best-liked salad? Most people would say potato salad. It goes with everything. It's cool yet substantial, and everyone enjoys the earthy potato flavor.

This summer, there is a new way to make potato salad. In fact, it makes preparing potato salad a real cinch. Use packaged hash brown and scalloped potatoes to eliminate the work. You can get the potatoes ready using packaged hash brown potatoes as easily as just letting the potatoes stand in boiling water until the water is absorbed. This is one of summer's most time-and-effort-saving discoveries!

And another inspiration is to turn side dish potato salad into convenient and satisfying main dishes. Tuna Potato Salad is one delicious version, using packaged hash brown potatoes. Another great main dish is Scalloped Potato Salad, using the packaged mix. Dried beef is used and the sauce mix that comes with the scalloped potatoes is utilized in an ingenious way to help make a savory dressing.

These two time-savers can be your summer standbys. They're great for vacation cooking and they'll save you time at home when you've been outdoors, and arrive home with only a short time to spare for supper.

Both salads can be made ahead in the cool of the morning, and kept chilling till dinner time. The Tuna Potato Salad can be completed except for last minute addition of the tuna; the Scalloped Potato Salad can be made ahead entirely, ready to serve for the evening meal.

TUNA POTATO SALAD

1 package (5.5 ounces) hash brown potatoes
1¾ cups boiling water
¾ cup mayonnaise
¼ cup lemon juice
1 cup chopped celery
¼ cup chopped parsley
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 cans (6½ or 7 ounces each) tuna, drained
2 cups chopped peeled tomatoes
8 slices bacon, cooked and crumbled
Lettuce leaves

Place potatoes in large bowl. Add boiling water and let stand 8 minutes or until water is absorbed. Stir in mayonnaise, lemon juice, celery, onion, parsley, salt and pepper. Cover and refrigerate several hours. At serving time stir in tuna, tomatoes and bacon. Serve on lettuce leaves.

YIELD: 6 servings.

SCALLOPED POTATO SALAD

1 package (5.5 ounces) scalloped potatoes
3 cups water
2 tablespoons salad oil
½ cup chopped onion
½ cup water
3 tablespoons red wine or cider vinegar
¼ cup milk
1 jar (2½ ounces) sliced dried beef, rinsed and chopped
1 cup chopped seeded, pared cucumber
¼ teaspoon dried dill weed
¼ cup sour cream

Remove sauce packet from potatoes. Heat water to boiling in medium saucepan. Add potatoes, cover and simmer 12 minutes, just until potatoes are tender. Drain and rinse with cold water; drain well. In large skillet heat oil. Add onion and cook until tender. Blend in sauce mix, then water and vinegar. Stir over medium heat until mixture thickens and comes to a boil. Remove from heat; stir in milk, dried beef, cucumber and dill. Stir in sour cream. Add potatoes and mix lightly. Cover and refrigerate several hours.

YIELD: 6 servings.

Chewy nectarine leather snacks

FRUIT LEATHER FOR NECTARINESS

2 pounds fresh California nectarines
1/3 cup sugar

Nectarines may be peeled or not, as desired. If skins are removed, leather will be smoother and lighter in color. To remove skins, drop fruit in boiling water. Let stand 20 to 30 seconds; then drain. Skins slip off easily. Slice nectarines to measure about 1 quart. Mash nectarines and combine with sugar in saucepan. Heat slowly until juice forms. Simmer 15 to 20 minutes, sitrring frequently, until slightly thickened. Cool and place in blender. Blend smooth. Cover a large baking sheet (14x17 inches) with a sheet of heavy plastic (a large heavy plastic bag, cut opens works nicely). Spread nectarine pulp in a thin layer over the sheet. It should be no more than ¼ inch thick. Place in full sun, cover with cheesecloth to keep off any insects and let stand until evening. Bring into the house overnight. Repeat exposure to sun the following day. It will require 2 to 3 days in full sun to make leather that is dry to touch and no longer sticky. Peel the leather off the plastic, cut fruit into sections and roll up tightly. Makes about 7 ounces leather.

Note: To dry fruit without sun, a gas oven with a pilot light supplies sufficient heat. About 36 hours in an oven with heat from pilot light only is sufficient to dry the nectarine mixture to leather.

Add chicken livers, thighs, to your menu plans

Two of the best ways to create new and unusual ideas with chicken today are to add chicken livers and chicken thighs to your menu plans.

Both are now plentiful, according to the National Broiler Council, so it's a good time to discover how versatile these often neglected chicken parts can be. Both are also loaded with nutrients essential to a family's good health.

Chicken livers, of course, are boneless and 100 per cent edible. They're especially rich in Vitamin A and in iron. Figure on a quarter pound per serving.

It's important not to overcook livers. Naturally tender and mild in flavor, they should be brown outside and slightly pink inside when done.

The simplest way to prepare livers is to saute in hot butter in a skillet over low heat. Cook about five minutes, turning often, and serve on toast points or rice with pan juices added.

Chicken livers are also delicious as pates or mousses or as bite-size appetizers. Serve them in a chafing dish stroganoff, as kabobs or in a variety or main dishes.

Chicken thighs, the meaty upper portion of the legs, average about four ounces each and two make a hearty serving. The moist, dark meat makes the thigh a choice piece to grill, bake or to fry. Or it can be easily boned for a special treat. Also try pounding the boned thigh into a thin cutlet, adding a favorite filling mixture and rolling.

One thigh provides 34.2 per cent of the adult recommended daily allowance of protein, yet it has just 108.7 calories. It also contributes Vitamin A, thiamine, riboflavin, niacin, iron, calcium and phosphrous to the diet.

Chicken livers are the gourmet ingredient in summer kabobs which can be cooked in a jiffy both indoors and out. Now's a good time to try them because the word from the National Broiler Council is that they're readily available.

For kabobs, cut chicken livers in half and thread alternately on skewers with onion and cherry tomatoes. Marinate in your favorite Italian dressing and broil or cook on the grill (about 7-10 minutes each side), basting frequently.

Chicken thighs also make excellent kabobs. Here's a recipe that won raves from judges in the Arkansas state cookoff, a preliminary to the 1976 National Chicken Cooking Contest.

CHICKEN KABOBS

- 6 broiler-fryer chicken thighs, skinned, boned and cut in 1-inch chunks
- 1 cup chili sauce
- 1 cup applesauce
- 1 small onion, chopped
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 1 tablespoon soy sauce
- 1 teaspoon flavor enhancer
- 1 large green pepper, chunked
- 1 can (16 oz.) new potatoes, drained
- 8 cherry tomatoes
- 8 chunks pineapple
- ¼ cup corn oil

In shallow glass dish mix together chili sauce, applesauce, onion, sugar, soy sauce and flavor enhancer. On 4 metal skewers arrange alternately chicken, green pepper, potatoes, tomatoes and pineapple. Place in marinade and let stand 4 hours. Remove skewers from marinade and add corn oil. Broil skewers about 6 inches from heat source (oven or grill), turning and basting about 20 minutes or until fork can be inserted in chicken with ease. Heat and serve remaining marinade as sauce. Serve with rice. Makes 4 servings.

SUMMER LUNCH
Hamburgers on Toasted Buns
Taco Aspic Fruit
Beverage

TACO ASPIC

The seasoning for this jellied salad was the inspiration of my Kentucky neighbor, Jean Verral.

- 5 ½-ounce can tomato juice
- 1 envelope unflavored gelatin
- 12-ounce can vegetable cocktail juice
- 1 teaspoon taco seasoning mix (from a 1¼-ounce envelope)
- Sliced cucumbers
- Sour cream

Pour the tomato juice into a pint or quart measure; sprinkle with the gelatin; let stand about 5 minutes to soften. In a small saucepan heat about half of the vegetable cocktail juice with the taco seasoning mix, stirring several times, until mixture begins to boil; stir into softened gelatin until gelatin dissolves. Stir in the remaining vegetable cocktail juice. Pour into five 1-2-cup molds or custard cups. Chill to set. Unmold at serving time and serve with the cucumbers and sour cream. Makes 5 servings.

Cress...

All cresses have crisp green leaves and a pungent taste. Peppergrass can be sprinkled over beet soup and all varieties can be boiled as potherbs. All are a tasty addition to summer salads.

Minced, cresses are good sprinkled on cream soup and are an excellent garnish for vegetables. Watercress is used to dress up canapes and seafood appetizers. It is also used to garnish meats, fish and fowl. It can be blended into cottage cheese and is a popular ingredient for cream cheese spreads.

Watercress goes well in omelets and other egg dishes and can be added to biscuit dough or pie crust. I like it chopped fine and sprinkled over carrots, cauliflower, potatoes and a host of green vegetables.

Watercress is a native of temperate Europe and was brought to this country years ago. It can be found by almost any American pond or brook.

The origins of cress are vague, but it is believed that it may be related to the Latin word for grass or perhaps the Sanskrit verb meaning to nibble.

One English writer who lived during the Renaissance period had his own views about cress. He opined that "the eating of cress doth restore the wanted bloom to the cheeks of old-young ladies."

Here's a recipe I like for watercress sauce.

- 13¾-ounce can chicken broth
- 3 tablespoons all purpose flour
- 1/3 cup cold water
- 1 ounce dry white wine
- 2½ cups chopped watercress
- ½ teaspoon salt
- Dash tabasco

Heat chicken broth in saucepan to boiling point. In a cup with fork blend flour and water till smooth. Reduce heat to medium and gradually stir mixture into hot broth and add wine. Cook, stirring steadily, till sauce is smooth and thickened. Stir in remaining ingredients. Simmer 2 minutes. Serve with chicken or fish.

Special light turkey loaf

When "he" offers to relieve you in the kitchen one of these lazy summer evenings and then begins looking for something to fix, why not suggest delightfully seasoned Turkey Loaf? Both convenient and economical, this special loaf yields a light and satisfying meal that will allow him time to relax, too. Turkey Loaf Amandine combines the loaf's homemade flavor and amandine sauce for appetite-arousing flavor that is sure to appeal to the entire family. Accompanied by garden fresh zucchini, crunch corn bread and a refreshing peach half.

The following timetable makes it so easy:

1. 1 hour 50 minutes before mealtime: place turkey loaf in oven according to package directions. (Relax for over an hour).

2. 40 minutes before mealtime: prepare corn bread according to directions on box mix; bake in oven with turkey loaf.

3. 30 minutes before mealtime: prepare amandine sauce according to recipe.

4. 15 minutes before mealtime: cook zucchini.

5. 10 minutes before mealtime: remove turkey loaf and corn bread from oven.

6. 5 minutes before mealtime: set table.

7. Last minute: enjoy your meal!

TURKEY LOAF AMANDINE

½ cup sliced almonds
5 tablespoons butter
¼ cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
1½ cups milk
½ cup dry white wine
1 2-lb. turkey loaf, cooked according to package directions

Brown almonds in 1 tablespoon butter; remove from pan. Melt 4 remaining tablespoons butter in fry pan; stir in flour and salt. Add milk and wine, stirring constantly until thickened. Heat over low heat 5 minutes stirring occasionally. Just before serving, add almonds. Serve over loaf slices.

Try snacking on Peach leathers

PEACH-PLUM LEATHER OR JERKY

1¼ pounds fresh peaches
1 pound fresh plums
¼ cup honey

Let peaches stand covered with boiling water for about a minute; rinse with cold water and slip off skins. Thinly slice the peaches and unpeeled plums, discarding pits and keeping each fruit separate. You need 2½ cups of each fruit. In a large saucepan, stirring constantly, slowly bring the plums and honey to a boil; add the peaches and, stirring constantly, boil for 3 minutes. Puree in an electric blender; cool to lukewarm.

Line the bottoms of 2 jellyroll pans each 15 by 10 by 1 inch with clear plastic wrap. Pour the fruit into the pans, spreading thinly and evenly — it will be no more than ⅛-inch thick. Dry in full sun or in the oven following directions below. The fruit puree will be dry enough when, after loosening an edge with a small metal spatula, you can peel it away from the plastic wrap in a sheet. Roll it up in plastic wrap so that the wrap touches each part of the fruit sheet. Store in the refrigerator as long as 4 months or in the freezer as long as 8 months.

Makes 2 large leathers. To serve as jerky, cut into strips.

Sun Drying: Place 2 strips of wood (we used strips about 1 inch wide and 1 inch thick(across the length of width of each pan so the strips are parallel and near the edges. Cover each pan with a single thickness of cheesecloth — the strips will keep it from touching the puree. Pull the cheesecloth taut and tuck it under each pan as you place them in full sun to dry. The drying time will vary from 8 to 24 hours. If not quite dry after the first day, bring the pans indoors overnight and continue drying in the sun a second day. Or finish drying in the oven according to directions for Oven Drying.

Oven Drying: Preheat the oven to Warm (140 to 150 degrees); turn off the heat; place the pans in the middle of the oven. For an electric oven, reheat as necessary to maintain a Warm temperature — a portable oven thermometer placed in the oven will show when this is needed. Pans need not be removed when the oven is reheated, but stay close by and turn off the heat as soon as the Warm temperature is reached. It's okay to leave the pans in the oven overnight without reheating and continue drying according to directions the next day.

A gas oven will not need reheating because the pilot light will provide enough warmth; open the door occasionally to let moisture escape. When drying 2 pans in a single electric or gas oven, alternate the pans occasionally and turn them if necessary. Drying time will vary from 8 to 24 hours.

Cooking is fun

Folks who enjoy reviving the old-time eating and drinking customs of some of the settlers of this country may be interested, this midsummer, in making Cherry Bounce. It's a potent concoction to "put by" when sweet cherries are in season, to serve in later months.

Abigail Adams, wife of John Adams, the second President of the United States, wrote about Cherry Bounce one January in a letter to her sister: "There is a kind of cake in fashion upon this day called New Years Cooky. This and cherry bounce as it is called is the old Dutch custom of treating their friends upon the return of every New Year."

Apparently New Englanders also made Cherry Bounce. In her "Yankee Cookbook" Imogene Wolcott offers an old-fashioned recipe for it and adds: "As the lady who gave this recipe used to say: 'Hifalutin people call this cherry cordial, but I say it's cherry bounce.' "

Cherry Bounce may be made with sweet cherries, sugar, spice and brandy. Quaffers of the liquid drained from the cherries are likely to say that it is well-named: it really makes one feel bouncy!

CHERRY BOUNCE

3 pounds fresh sweet cherries
1 pound sugar
1 cinnamon stick, broken
2 teaspoons whole cloves
1 bottle 4-5 quart brandy

Choose perfect cherries; wash, remove stems and dry completely. Do not pit. In a large crock that has a cover, layer the cherries, sugar and spices; add brandy; stir thoroughly. Cover and let stand at room temperature at least 2 months. Offer drained liquid as a liqueur; refrigerate cherries and use in various ways for desserts.

LIBBY ALSBERG'S DILLY BEANS

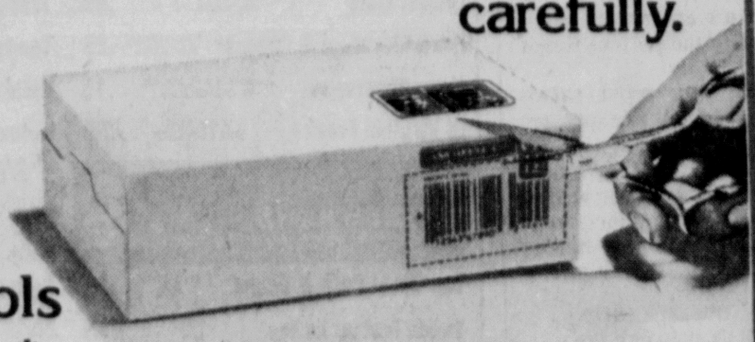

Trim the tips from 1 1-2 pounds green beans and leave them whole. Wash well and pat dry with paper towel. Heat 3 tablespoons peanut oil with 1 tablespoon chopped fresh dill in deep saucepan. Add the beans and cover tightly. Place over flame guard or asbestos mat. Cook very gently, shaking the pan often, until just tender. Place the beans in heated serving dish and add salt, freshly ground pepper, a little fresh lemon juice, 3 tablespoons melted butter and chopped fresh parsley. From "The Everyday Gourmet," a food and wine letter published by Libby and George Alsberg.

Cook these beef rolls on an iron skillet

One valuable vessel that has never gone out of style is the old fashioned iron skillet. And for cooking these tasty beef rolls with their colorful filling you just can't beat it. Use serving size pieces of thinly sliced beef top round and roll up with sticks of carrot, celery and dill pickle on the inside. For midsummer menus the California Beef Council consumer information specialists suggest serving them cold in hot dog buns for a satisfying pick and go lunch.

CALICO BEEF ROLLS

- 1¼ pounds beef top round, sliced ¼-inch thick
- Salt and pepper
- 2 tablespoons chopped onion
- 6 sticks each celery, carrot and dill pickle
- 1 tablespoon cooking oil
- ¾ cup beef broth

Pound beef lightly to flatten. Cut into 6 pieces, trimming off fat. Sprinkle with salt, pepper and onion. Place stick of celery, carrot and pickle on each piece. Roll up and tie with string. Brown beef rolls slowly in oil in heavy skillet. Add broth. Cover tightly. Simmer 1 to 1½ hours until tender. If broth evaporates during cooking, add a little more to keep beef from sticking. Serve hot or cold. Makes 6 beef rolls.

Beef is the beginning for fabulous finger foods. Sandwiches, snacks, hors d'oeuvres and other nibbles are appetite satisfying, nourishing and easy to make with lean cooked beef, either hot or cold. Consumer specialists for the California Beef Council remind us that casual eating is an important part of the daily diet. It makes good sense to include high protein beef as often as possible in mini meals and snacks.

Many favorite beef dishes adapt well to portable feasts. A brown bagger's beef stew, for instance, includes diced cold cooked beef wrapped up with sliced raw carrots, celery and canned baby potatoes. A cold variation of stroganoff is simply chilled roast beef slices rolled up with sour cream, sliced onions and mushrooms. Add a small bottle of wine for a gourmet lunch.

Hot beef tidbits to eat from picks are favorites at any party or festive gathering. The California Beef Council consumer specialists recommend this easy recipe. Broil or grill juicy steak bites to medium rare. Serve with dips of chili sauce, curried mayonnaise or bearnaise sauce. Lean tender steak such as top round or round tip are ideal.

Big meaty beef ribs should be eaten with fingers for utmost enjoyment. Also called barbecue ribs and beef spareribs, they have the same satisfying flavor as the tender rib roasts they're cut from. Allow one pound or three ribs per person.

Steak and cheese team up in a satisfying supper dish. Individual breakfast or sandwich steaks are perfectly sized to fit on slices of french bread. The California Beef Council consumer information specialists remind us that cut from the eye of round or round tip. these convenient boneless thrifty steaks are very lean and suitable for quick pan frying. To make a supper sandwich, serve on toasted bread topped with sliced jack cheese, fresh tomato slices and green pepper rings.

Tasty beef spread covers any occasion. To make your beef spread, simmer 1-inch cubes of beef stew about 1 hour or until tender. Shred the beef and combine with sour cream, dijon style mustard and desired seasonings. This is perfect on melba toast, crisp crackers, celery stalks or cucumber slices.

Pocket bread with hot beef filling is hearty out of hand eating. To make the filling, brown diced top round or lean ground beef. Season with chili powder and taco sauce. For meal sized portions, heap into half rounds of pocket bread. For appetizers, cut pocket break into quarters. Shredded lettuce, chopped green onion and grated cheese are the appropriate condiments.

Consumer specialists at the California beef council recommend choosing snack foods that contribute valuable nutrients to the daily diet. Three and one half ounces of lean cooked beef — about the amount in a breakfast steak or generous burger — provides about half the daily recommended allowance of protein for adults as well as supplying important amounts of minerals and the B vitamins.

Quick appetizer beef balls are square instead of round. Mix a pound of lean ground beef with your other favorite meatball ingredients. Shape the mixture into a rectangle on a shallow baking pan. Mark into 1-inch squares, centering each with a cocktail onion, stuffed olive or almond. Bake at 400 degrees for 15 minutes. Cut into squares and serve warm on picks.

Try dressed up relish salads

There's an old adage that the next best thing to cultivating a garden is to cultivate a gardener. If you fall into that first category chances are you're used to sharing your bounty with friends. This year, for a change, instead of giving a basket full of naked zucchini, why not dress up the vegetables you give?

Three new recipes dress up garden fresh vegetables in a clever new way.

Zippy Zucchini Relish Salad combines diced zucchini or yellow squash with green pepper and green onion. An envelope of spaghetti sauce adds the extra zip to the dressing which is perfect for mild flavored squash.

South-of-the Border Relish Salad features green beans, celery, green pepper and tomatoes in a colorful dressing with Mexican flavor. An envelope of chili seasoning mix takes the guess work out of creating the perfect flavor blend.

Give your relish salads in pretty but inexpensive apothecary jars . . . include the recipe for a nice touch. They all keep well in the refrigerator for a couple of days which makes them an even nicer gift!

ZIPPY ZUCCHINI RELISH SALAD

- ½ cup oil
- ¼ cup vinegar
- 1 envelope (1½-oz.) spaghetti sauce mix
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 5 to 6 cups diced zucchini or yellow squash
- ½ cup chopped green pepper
- 2 tablespoons chopped green onion

Combine oil, vinegar, contents of sauce mix envelope, and sugar. Add zucchini, green pepper, and green onion; toss lightly. Chill before serving. Makes 6 cups.

SOUTH-OF-THE BORDER RELISH SALAD

- 1 pound green beans, cut in ½-inch pieces
- ½ cup oil
- ¼ cup vinegar
- 1 envelope (1¾-oz.) Chili mix
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 1 cup chopped celery
- ½ cup chopped green pepper
- 2 tomatoes, chopped

Cook beans in small amount boiling salted water 10 minutes; drain and chill. Combine oil, vinegar, contents of chili mix envelope, and sugar. Add beans, celery, pepper, and tomatoes; toss lightly. Chill before serving. Makes 5 to 6 cups.

VERSATILE CANNED HAM

Canned hams are key to versatile, easy dining

Canned hams afford consumers versatility and convenience when it comes to meal planning. A fully-cooked canned ham may be stored in the refrigerator for those meal time occasions when unexpected company arrives. It can be sliced cold for sandwiches or heated in the oven if time permits.

Canned ham becomes elegant company or family fare when baked with Cinnamon Peach Glaze. Frozen peaches, brown sugar, lemon juice and cinnamon are the only ingredients needed for this easy recipe.

A changeover in production methods for hams in pear-shaped cans offers consumers the advantage of consistently good quality in a canned ham. The changes made in trimming, shaping and packing each ham take advantage of the natural structure of the meat. For consumers, this means leaner, more tender slices of ham. Additional advantages include uniform color, real hickory smoked flavor and attractive appearance.

BAKED HAM WITH CINNAMON PEACH GLAZE

Yield: About 2 cups glaze

5 pound canned ham
16 ounce package frozen freestone peach chunks, thawed
¼ cup water
2 tablespoons brown sugar
1 teaspoon lemon juice
½ teaspoon cinnamon

Place ham on rack in shallow open pan. Heat in 325 degree oven 1½ to 2 hours or until internal temperature reaches 130 to 140 degrees on meat thermometer.

To prepare Cinnamon Peach Glaze: Combine all ingredients in small saucepan and bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer 5 minutes to blend flavors. Spoon glaze over ham during the last ½ hour of cooking time. Serve any remaining Glaze with ham.

Tart relish makes use of summer corn

Sweet corn, either white or yellow, is now a year-round crop with more than 200 varieites grown in the United States. This abundant vegetable, enjoyed by many on the cob, also ranks high among foods to be preserved.

Corn relish is one recipe suggestion, that combines fresh corn niblets, green and red peppers with celery and a well-seasoned vinegar solution for a colorful and flavorful treat.

Make generous quantities of relish while corn is plentiful, then you can serve it during the summer to brighten picnics or barbecue menus and still have some on hand for winter holiday relish trays.

CORN RELISH

16-20 ears young tender corn
1¼ cups chopped onions
1 cup chopped green pepper
1 cup chopped sweet red pepper
1 cup chopped celery
2 2/3 cups distilled white vinegar
2 cups water
1½ cups granulated sugar
1½ tablespoons mustard seed
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon celery seed
½ teaspoon turmeric

Peel husks and silks from corn; trim blemishes. Boil corn 5 minutes, then quickly dip in cold water. Cut kernels from cob; measure 2½ quarts cut corn. Combine corn with onions and remaining ingredients in saucepot. Simmer 20 minutes, stirring occasionally. Pack into clean jars to within ½ inch of top making sure vinegar solution covers vegetables. Immediately adjust covers as jar manufacturer directs. Process 15 minutes in boiling water bath. Makes 6-7 pints.

Seafood salad is great for hot-weather menus

A crisp fruit and seafood salad, with cooling "Pineapple Iced Tea", makes a nutritious team for a hot summer day. Whether you've been busy on the tennis court, swimming, bicycling or just relaxing, "Summer Seafood Salad" will fit any hot weather menu.

Crisp iceberg lettuce makes the inviting base for this hearty combination. Top it with canned pineapple slices, hard cooked egg and seafood (your choice of crab, shrimp or tuna). Serve the salads with a special dressing made with buttermilk and filled with the crunch of crisp cucumber, radishes and green onion.

The special iced tea is made by combining syrup from the pineapple with instant tea and water. Pour over ice and tuck fresh lemon slices and mint sprigs in each glass.

Keep a can of Hawaiian pineapple in the refrigerator this summer. You'll discover endless ways to enjoy its refreshing flavor. Serve it as the breakfast fruit for a change of pace, either by itself or in combination with sliced bananas or fresh strawberries. Top barbecued hamburgers with a golden slice. Use it to create a variety of easy low calorie desserts.

SUMMER SEAFOOD SALAD

Buttermilk Dressing
1 (1 pound 4 ounce) can pineapple slices
1 head iceberg lettuce
3 hard-cooked eggs
1 cup cooked crabmeat or shrimp (or, one 6½ or 7 ounce can solid pack tuna)

Prepare Buttermilk Dressing and chill. Chill all remaining ingredients. When ready to serve, drain pineapple, saving syrup for Pineapple Iced Tea. Line chilled salad plates with crisp lettuce leaves. Coarsely shred remaining lettuce to measure 1½ quarts. Divide among salad plates. Top each with 2 pineapple slices, sliced egg and seafood. Serve with Buttermilk Dressing. Makes 5 servings.

BUTTERMILK DRESSING: Stir ½ cup each buttermilk and mayonnaise, 1 teaspoon lemon juice and ½ teaspoon each dried dill and salt together. Stir in ¼ cup each chopped green onion, coarsely shredded radish and pared, finely chopped cucumber. Makes 1½ cups.

PINEAPPLE ICED TEA

2 tablespoons instant tea
2 cups water
Syrup from 1 pound 4 ounce can pineapple
Ice cubes
Lemon slices and mint sprigs

Blend instant tea with water. Add syrup from pineapple. Pour over ice cubes. Decorate each glass with a lemon slice and mint sprig. Makes 4 to 5 servings.

Fruit snacks

Because their skins are good-tasting and fuzz-free, nectarines are especially good for eating out of hand and need not be peeled for most cooking purposes. Unlike many other summer fruits, nectarines maintain their tart-sweet flavor and firm texture during heating and are, therefore, particularly suitable for use in cooked dishes.

Fresh ginger

When a recipe calls for "green" ginger, use fresh ginger root. Preserved ginger may be candied or packed in syrup.

Defected for love of millionaire's daughter

MONTREAL (AP) — Sergei Nemtsanov, the 17-year-old Soviet diver who defected during the Olympics, did it for the love of an American millionaire's daughter, the Montreal Gazette reported today.

Quoting immigration and police sources, the Gazette said Nemtsanov met the girl during a diving meet in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., last year and thought he would never see her again. But a last-minute change in the Soviet Olympic team brought him to Montreal, and he seized the opportunity to renew his romance.

The girl was not identified. But the Gazette said Nemtsanov may be hiding at the Montreal home of a friend he made in Fort Lauderdale.

The paper said its sources reported Nemtsanov wants to live in the United States with his sweetheart, but his Montreal lawyer, Alex Paterson, denied that.

"From the information I have, he wants to stay here and has never mentioned going to the United States," the lawyer said. "His prime interest is diving and eventually he would like to be a trainer. I think he will spend the remainder of this year trying to become fluent in English."

He added that the Royal Canadian Mounted Police "have him under their protection."

The Gazette also reported that Nemtsanov has contacted Mikhail Baryshnikov, the Soviet dancer who defected during a Bolshoi Ballet tour of Canada in 1974 and is currently appearing in New York.

The tall, blond athlete left the Olympic Village Thursday night and asked Canadian officials to let him stay in Canada. Soviet officials failed to convince him to return home at a meeting in the presence of Canadian officials Sunday.

The youth apparently was unmoved by telegrams produced by the Soviets from his mother and grandmother urging him to come back to Russia. The Gazette said one source reported that Nemtsanov "doesn't believe it was his grandmother and mother who wrote the telegrams to Prime Minister (Pierre Elliott) Trudeau asking for his return."

The Canadian government gave Nemtsanov permission to stay in Canada for six months.

BUCKET BRIGADE — U.S. Army Sgt. Kenneth Chapman fills a water bucket for Mayor Kurt Gutezeit of Sulzdorf, West Germany, while other villagers wait their turn. Teamsters going strike route to improve pacts

ARVIN (AP) — The Teamsters Union is trying to force improved contracts at some southern Kern County table grape vineyards by ordering workers to strike during the current harvest, authorities said today.

The aim is to raise pay at ranches with Teamsters Contracts to the $3.15 hourly level achieved in a contract signed last week with Dalton Richardson.

Richardson was the Teamsters' first election victory after state-conducted representation voting began last fall. However, votes have not been conducted at other ranches in this area because elections were halted in February when the Agricultural Labor Relations Board ran out of funds.

The rival United Farm Workers of America charged that the renegotiations violate the state act requirement that only a union certified through secret ballot elections can negotiate a contract. UFW President Cesar Chavez said he sent telegrams to involved growers Monday warning of possible legal action if they agree to amend their previous contracts with the Teamsters.

Teamsters' officials reportedly were negotiating this morning and were unavailable for comment.

But one grower, William Mosesian, said he did agree Monday to boost pay of his employes 45 cents an hour as demanded by the Teamsters.

Another grower, John J. Kovacevich, said an attempt to get his workers out of the field had little success and his attorney advised against renegotiating the contract.

A spokesman for the South Central Farmers Committee, which represents table grape growers, said the possibility of legal action to enforce the existing contracts is being contemplated.

The Teamsters were attempting to pull crews out at the Kovacevich ranch and El Rancho Farms this morning, but there were no reports of violence, Kern County sheriff's office reported. Patrols in the area were beefed up as a precaution.

Last gasp time at Dodger Stadium

It'll be "last gasp" time at Dodger Stadium the next four days.

Cincinnati's rampaging Reds roll in for four games with the second-placers starting Thursday night. If the Dodgers are going to make any kind of a run at the Reds, it will have to begin now.

On July 22, we said that in order to gain on the Reds, the Dodgers must get (1) better run production, (2) better hitting from Dusty Baker and (3) better pitching from Don Sutton and Burt Hooton.

It was pointed out that the Angelenos leave an awful lot of men on base, especially second or third.

Since then there has been improvement in only one of the three areas.

Sutton (12-8), who faces Fred Norman (10-2) in Thursday's opener, has allowed only three earned runs in his last 17 innings of work for a 1.58 earned run average in that span.

For the season, Sutton's ERA is still a horrendous 4.19. But that is down from the 4.50 of July 22. He has won both of his starts.

On the other hand, Hooton Tuesday night won his first game since July 5. He went into the game with a 4.19 earned run average. However, his two-hit shutout may indicate he finally has gotten untracked.

Baker has spent most of the time on the bench since that time. His game-winning home run Monday night was only his third. But with Reggie Smith sidelined, Baker drew a reprieve.

Dusty's season lost

The season is too far gone to save it statistically for the rangy (6-2, 195 lbs.) outfielder, but Dusty could still do a lot of damage if he ever starts to hit.

In his case, ANY change would be an improvement.

On the other hand, any joy over anything productive that Baker may do could be offset by injuries to Smith. Off his past record, Reggie has been injury prone.

Unfortunately, he has displayed the same tendencies since joining the Dodgers. In the four years prior to this season, Smith has missed an average of 31 games a season.

This year, he already has missed 24 of 105 games with 57 left. He won't start tonight either to make it 25 misses of 106. However, the Dodgers hope to have him back in right field for Cincinnati.

The Dodgers still are averaging slightly over seven runners per game left on base.

Shocking as it may seem, the Dodger pitching staff has a higher staff earned run average than the opposition, 3.58 to 3.53.

What the Dodgers need most is to have a fire built under them. The business-like approach hasn't paid off.

HERE 'N THERE — The U. S. team that will represent this country in the World Amateur Baseball Tournament in Taiwan will practice for a week at Claremont-Mudd's diamond beginning August 31.

Bill Arce is one of the coaches assisting head coach Joe Record of Phillips University in Enid, Okla. There are 20 players including catcher Tim Burzette of La Verne..

Public can watch

Valley residents will get a chance to see one of the best teams of college baseball players ever to get together on a local field.

Among the 20 players on the team are first baseman Pete Van Horne of NCAA National Champion Arizona, pitchers Rod Boxberger of USC, Greg Harris of Long Beach St., and infielder Oswald Smith of Cal Poly SLO.

Arizona State's Floyd Bannister was to have been on the team, but Bannister signed a pro contract.

The public is invited to the daily practices on the CMC diamond. The U. S. team will meet for a "scrimmage" game at Anaheim Stadium, Sunday, Sept. 5 with a team composed of players from the Angels' Idaho Falls and Quad Cities farm clubs.

That game will be immediately following the Angels-Oakland Athletics contest.

* * *

The San Diego Padres are one of the baseball clubs whose players are permitted to hold a "kangaroo court" after Padre victories.

A recent session saw judge Willie McCovey fined $3 for "pouting" during the team's series with Houston. Third baseman Doug Rader courageously introduced the charge and the judge was found guilty.

Padres' owner Ray Kroc has put his son-in-law to work as an "administrative assistant." The move has caused much discussion among club officials and players.

Strikeouts not Hartzell's style

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — The image of the California Angels is that of a team built around strong-arm strikeout artists like Nolan age is being tarnished by rookie Paul Hartzell.

Hartzell tossed a four-hitter against Texas Tuesday night, nearly matching a three-hit white-washing in his previous start against the Rangers, as the Angels won 4-0.

"I'm not trying for strikeouts out there. I'm just not that kind of a pitcher," Hartzell said, "and I never will be."

The lanky rookie, 14 months out of Lehigh University, relied on an assortment of sinkers, sliders and changeups to induce the Rangers into 18 groundouts. He struck out only two.

The Rangers, in the doldrums of 21 losses in 26 games caused primarily by a batting slump, beat the Texas League All-Stars 18-4 Monday night, but they obviously left their hits in San Antonio.

"The Rangers may be going bad now, but there are no bad teams in the American League," said Hartzell. "Any team might knock out the best pitcher in the league at any time. Looking back, I feel like I let up on just one pitch all night and that the hardest ball they hit—a single by Jeff Burroughs. That just proves that you can't ever let up."

Manager Norm Sherry, hopeful of being rehired for 1977 since the Angels have gone 7-3 after he replaced Dick Williams, said, "This team is not worried about mistakes now. They're relaxed and having fun. They're professionals, but you still have to enjoy the game to play it."

"Hartzell has done well every time he's started although he hasn't had shutouts like he has against Texas," Sherry added. "When you have a good location on your pitches like he had, you will be tough against anybody."

Texas managed two hits in the seventh against Hartzell, now 3-2 with a 2.29 earned run average, but otherwise he was in control throughout the game.

Jim Umbarger, who has been given a total of one run in his last three starts and now has lost five decisions in a row, blanked the Angels until the sixth, when they started a streak of four consecutive one-run innings.

Tommy Davis singled home a run in the sixth inning and hit a sacrifice fly in the eighth, Rusty Torres hit his fourth homer in the seventh and Jerry Remy singled in another run in the ninth.

Davis spent spring training with the New York Yankees, but was released just before the season started and was signed by the Angels as a designated hitter.

"My career would probably be over if it wasn't for the designated hitter," said Davis, who started the season with the highest lifetime DH batting average. "I like to hit and I don't have the range or agility to play the field much anymore."

He has played in the field only once since 1974.

"I don't want to go out by being released," the 37-year-old Davis said. "I want to go out on my own."

Hooton talks a win

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Burt Hooton has had the kind of fortune that would make a guy talk to himself.

So he did and, what's more, he listened to what he had to say.

"I talked to myself the whole game, telling myself to keep at it, not to give in, to keep concentrating," he said.

The result was a two-hit, 2-0, shutout over Houston, Los Angeles' fourth win in a row and eighth straight over the Astros.

"I had been thinking all kinds of negative things and I wasn't going to let it happen this time," said Hooton who had dropped six of his previous seven decisions.

Bill Buckner singled home Dave Lopes twice, the Dodgers' only runs off loser Dan Larson, 1-3, but, as Hooton said later, that was all he needed.

The Astros got two hits in the first inning, by Greg Gross and Cesar Cedeno, and not another the rest of the way.

Yet Houston threatened in the final two innings when Hooton issued four of his five walks.

He walked the first two batters in the eighth and got out of it. He walked two more in the ninth, but struck out Cedeno, got Bob Watson on a deep drive to right and struck out pinchhitter Cliff Johnson to end it.

"I was high with my pitches the whole game," said Hooton, 7-11, "But I wasn't going to give up my stuff and throw a nuthin' pitch just to get it in the strike zone."

Los Angeles now has defeated Houston 21 times in the last 24 meetings over three seasons. Yet, they failed to gain on Cincinnati with their latest victory and still trail the Reds by nine games in the National League West.

The Dodgers, who play the Reds in a four-game series over the weekend in Dodger Stadium, will try to add to their win streak Wednesday night, sending Doug Rau, 10-7, against the Astros' James Rodney Richard.

The Dodgers got their runs in the fourth and seventh innings.

In the fourth Lopes reached first safely on an error by Enos Cabell, stole second and scored when Buckner singled. In the seventh Lopes walked, stole second — his 33rd successful steal in 40 attempts — and again Buckner singled him home.

DODGER DATA — The Dodgers announced a change in the pitching matchups for the Reds series.

In Thursday's opener, former Dodger Fred Norman (10-2) replaces Gary Nolan faces Don Sutton (12-8). According to the Dodgers, Nolan is pitching today for the Reds instead of Don Gullett.

It'll be Rick Rhoden (9-0) vs. Santo Alcala (10-3) Friday, Tommy John (6-7) vs. Pat Zachry (9-3) Saturday and Hooton (7-11) vs. Jack Billingham (8-8) Sunday afternoon.

Tuesday night's attendance of 18,684 put the Dodgers over 1,700,000 for the season. They are averaging slightly over 33,000 per contest.

Bill Russell has hit in 12 of the last 13 games and 27 of the last 31.

Paper charges Hayes with illegal recruitment

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Cash, promised Rose Bowl trips and a coach's car for a weekend were inducements used by the Ohio State coaching staff to recruit players, says a copyrighted story in today's Michigan State University student newspaper.

The State News said one source, who is now a player at another Big Ten school, said he received cash from Woody Hayes, the Ohio State head coach, during a recruiting visit to Columbus in January 1974.

"Coach Rudy Hubbard set up a dinner with Woody for me," the source told the State News. "He told me that I should come to Ohio State because I would be able to go to the Rose Bowl and that my family and friends would also be able to go for free.

"Woody then looked up at me and stretched back in his chair, reached in his trousers and gave me a $50 bill and said, 'Have a good time, son,'" the State News reported.

The newspaper said Hayes was not available for comment Tuesday night on the charges, which if true would be rule violations of the National Collegiate Athletic Association and the Big Ten. Ohio State Athletic Director Ed Weaver, in French Lick, Ind., to attend a Big Ten meeting, told the newspaper he had "no comment" on the charges.

The source said Buckeye fullback Pete Johnson was assigned to be his guide for the weekend in Columbus, and that he met with Johnson and Hubbard after the dinner with Hayes.

"Coach Hubbard gave Johnson some money and the keys to his green Chevrolet...He told him to show me around.

"Saturday night, Coach Hubbard gave Johnson his new red 1974 Gremlin for us to use," the source told the State News. "Both nights, we made several stops at bars including one which had a cover charge of $3 per person. And I never picked up the tab on any of them," the source told the State News.

Concerning the money allegedly passed to Johnson, Hubbard told the State News, "I never gave Pete Johnson any illegal money. I can't really remember the incident you're talking about. But we never did anything illegal at OSU."

'Shark' slates an exhibition

La Verne College announced Tuesday that a basketball exhibition, open to the public, will be held Friday night in conjunction with Jerry Tarkanian's cage clinic at the school.

The exhibition, featuring the flashy Tarkanian who led UN-Las Vegas to the NCAA Regionals this past season, will be held at the La Verne campus center from 7 to 8 p.m.

Admission to the Friday night exhibition will be free, and the public is invited to attend.

WBC to review controversial fight

LOS ANGEOES (AP) — The World Boxing Council says it plans an official review of a controversial super-bantamweight fight between South Korean challenger Yung Domkyun and Rigoberto Riasco after the referee for the bout said he changed his decision favoring Riasco because he feared for his life.

Fight referee Larry Rozadilla said Tuesday he had changed his ruling naming Rigoberto the winner because his life was threatened by "gangster types".

Rozadilla first raised the hand of defending champ Riasco as the victor in the 15-round fight in Pusan in a 154-143 decision.

But an hour after the fight he said, "I made a mistake in putting down my scores. It was raining and the judge's papers were all wet and I placed the scores in the wrong places. The Korean is the winner.

Back home, Rozadilla said he made the change because he feared for his and Riasco's safety. "Gangster types were associated with the promotion," he said.

"I was physically and bodily dragged and pushed into the ring against my will," the referee said.

"I got a few bruises. I was lucky. I was worried about getting stabbed, shot or stomped to death."

Rozadilla said if he hadn't given in, "I would have been killed and so would Riasco."

WBC President Jose Sulaiman said a review was planned of the fight, though Kyun is being recognized as the champ.

"We have to see the video tape and later listen to the judges and everyone else in order to make a final decision.

The referee said Riasco's manager, Luis Espada, told him, "You did the right thing, Larry. Otherwise we would have been killed."

What will become of Olympic facility?

MONTREAL (AP) — The Games are over, the thousands of athletes and spectators are gone. Now Montreal must decide what to do with the Olympic facilities, which barely were ready for use in the recently-concluded two-week spectacle.

Victor Goldbloom, the Quebec minister in charge of the Canadian Olympic Installations Board, says that work will continue in order to complete the $788 million Olympic Stadium and pool, the $85 million Olympic Village and the $62 million Velodrome.

"The Board may be in existence for another seven or eight years," Goldbloom says, "until the financial situation is cleared." The "financial situation" includes the $120 to $130 million still to be spent on construction through the next 18 months.

The baseball Expos and Canadian Football League Alouettes expect to use the Olympic Stadium for their games. The Alouettes had hoped to finish the current season in the 72,000-seat facility, which will have an artificial turf installed to replace the natural grass used during the Olympics.

The stadium tower—complete with a retractable roof—will be built, but Goldbloom notes that it hasn't been decided whether to use concrete, as originally planned, or steel, in the construction.

"It may take more than a year to get the tower completed," says Goldbloom.

The pool will become a municipal facility later this month. Fees similar to those charged for other city pools will be charged.

The Village is being converted into a housing complex, but it will not be a low-income project, nor will it be a luxury condominium, both of which have been suggested.

The OIB hopes to have the apartments available to occupants by October.

The Velodrome is ready for use and will host the Canadian cycling championships August 12-14.

An eight-man committee has been appointed to oversee the use of the Olympic Park. Maurice Custeau will be responsible for booking "attractive events" into the various sites.

None of those events can be as attractive as the Olympics but the Province of Quebec and the city of Montreal will try to fill the Olympic sites as often as possible to help cut into the huge deficit caused by the Games.

New Orleans awaits Gail

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Gail Goodrich, free agent of the Los Angeles Lakers, is expected to be signed by the New Orleans Jazz Thursday, team officials said.

Barry Mendelson, Jazz executive vice president, said Tuesday that, "Gail is coming to town and we anticipate some sort of agreement."

The acquitision of Goodrich would give the Jazz, with Pete Maravich, two of the most powerful guards in the National Basketball Association.

Goodrich has a lifetime average of just under 20 points a game and led the Lakers in steals and assists after sitting out five games in a contract dispute last year.

But the added expense of Goodrich also changes Jazz plans for the American Basketball Association dispersal draft Thursday.

"For the money we'd have to spend for some of these players...it's possible we may trade or pass on these selections," said Mendelson, referring to the Jazz's seventh-position pick in the draft.

Purse strings pulled on Stram

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — New Orleans Saints owner John Mecom Jr. abruptly ended the honeymoon and slammed the checkbook on Coach Hank Stram Tuesday.

Stram has made a point of displaying "first-class" additions to the Saints' environment since he took on the job of revitalizing the National Football League club.

"As long as the money was being spent towards football, I had no objection," Mecom said. "But when it comes to these frivolous things that have been going on with the cherry pickers, the extra goal posts, white shag carpets, $4,000 television sets, a personal staff and about 20 other things that have nothing to do with football games, then I have to put my foot down."

Mecom called Stram onto the carpet Tuesday morning — and Stram was visibly shaken by the owner's remarks. His only comment was: "I'm flabbergasted!"

The cost of holding training camp at the plush facilities built by and for baseball's Los Angeles Dodgers is estimated at $500,000 by the Saints. The figure didn't include some of the extras.

Stram ordered four additional goal posts to make sure each practice field had a complete set, the rationale being that a football practice field ought to look like one. The posts cost $4,700 each. The television set and shag carpet are in Stram's office at Saints headquarters. The personal staff is his two administrative assistants.

The "20 other things" include everything from glow-in-the-dark parking signs for players to a request for three charter buses to take the team from training camp to the Vero Beach airport — four blocks away.

"Even if the Saints sell out every game this season, we stand to lose $1.3 million," Mecom said. "Now, not all of that is Hank's fault. Some of it is just the rising cost of doing business.

"All of this stuff about football being a tax write-off is just stuff. Our goal is to win, but we're not going to go broke doing it."

Mecom's outburst was sparked — at least in part — by the team's futile effort against Pittsburgh in the Saints' exhibition opener Saturday night.

The Saints were held without a first down most of the opening half while the Steelers were rolling up a three-touchdown lead. When the Steeler reserves took over, the Saints managed to score twice and lose 20-14.

"I don't want to hear about the second half," Mecom said. "Sure, it was preseason. Sure, we played a lot of people. Sure, it was our first game. But all of those things held true for the other side as well.

"I just can't accept that rationale. I'm not trained to think like a coach. I know one damned thing — losing looks the same whether you're spending $500,000 or $2 million. I can't stomach it either way."

Yankees upstage 'Bird'

By Associated Press

Mark Fidrych is usually the main attraction when he pitches, but the New York Yankees won't be upstaged by the Birdman of Detroit.

The Yankees showed Tuesday night that they also have a flair for showmanship, sprinkling beans on the mound while the reknown "Bird" was performing.

While the Yankees fed Fidrych "bird seed", Fidrych was feeding the Yankees fastballs. Both Roy White and Oscar Gamble hit them out of the park, helping New York to a dramatic 4-3 victory over the Detroit Tigers and their flashy rookie.

"I would have loved to beat the Yankees," said Fidrych. "The crowd didn't come out to see me. They came out to see the Yankees beat me."

Whatever the crowd of 44,909 came out for at Yankee Stadium, they weren't disappointed. They not only got to see their Yankees win, but they also saw Fidrych's showy routine of talking to baseballs, bouncing around the field like a berserk billiard ball and, yes, even eating beans off the mound.

"We were feeding the Bird," said New York Manager Billy Martin. "(Graig) Nettles dropped beans all over the mound and he was picking them up and eating them."

Martin added a postscript: "Birds can't talk, but he can sure pitch. He's very good for the game—and good for the gate."

Gamble's two-run homer in the seventh inning provided the winning margin for New York. He connected off Fidrych after Nettles had singled.

Fidrych, who also gave up a two-run homer to White in the third, suffered only his fourth loss against 11 victories and it marked the first time the flamboyant rookie was defeated when Detroit had scored a run.

"Both home runs were fastballs," Fidrych noted. "I had both of them low where I wanted them. My fastball was good and my curve was good. The slider wasn't too good tonight.

Royals 7, Twins 1

Sore-legged Hal McRae hobbled around the basepaths with a double and a home run and Buck Martinez added a two-run double to spark Kansas City over Minnesota and snap the Twins' eight-game winning streak.

The victory raised Kansas City's lead in the American League West to 9½ games over the Twins, who had surged into second place the past week.

McRae, playing sporadically since suffering a painful muscle pull July 15, convinced Manager White Herzog that he could play Tuesday night. But he was only able to run at a trot. His first-inning double off Eddie Bane would have been a triple for an average runner.

"There's a good feeling on this team when Mac is in there, I can't argue with that," said Herzog. "The guys know he's scrappy and they know he's going to get hits to drive them in. But, lord, what would we do if he seriously hurt that leg?"

Indians 1, Red Sox 0

Dennis Eckersley pitched a three-hitter and Tommy Smith drove in the winning run with a sacrifice fly in the 10th inning as Cleveland ended Boston's four-game winning streak.

Boston reliever Tom Murphy, 2-5, was tagged with the loss. Tiant had allowed only three hits in the first nine innings.

Brewers 4, Orioles 2

George Scott drove in two runs on a pair of base hits, leading Milwaukee over Baltimore. The Brewers sewed up the game with a two-run fifth inning that gave them a 3-2 lead. A leadoff double by Von Joshua, a single by Jack Heidemann and a fielder's choice by Robin Yount scored the tying run. The winning run then came home on Scott's single.

A's 7, White Sox 3

Joe Rudi smashed two doubles and a single and drove in two runs to lead Oakland over Chicago. Dick Bosman, 4-0, scattered five hits over five innings and picked up his eighth career victory over the White Sox with relief help from Paul Lindblad and Rollie Fingers, who was credited with his 15th save.

No-hit gem for Coronado

An eight-inning no-hitter by Southwest A's hurler Aurelio Coronado highlighted play Tuesday night in the Pomona City Senior Division Tournament at Ralph Welch Park.

Coronado outdueled mound foe Tim Hiner as he paced Southwest to a 2-0 victory over Olive Vista, the Ted Greene titlist. Hiner matched zeroes with Coronado for seven innings but two singles, a throwing error and a passed ball netted the A's two runs in the top of the eighth and Coronado perserved his gem in the bottom of the frame.

The 15-year-old right-hander struck out 15 and walked four, as Olive Vista had nothing close to a hit in the contest.

In other tourney action, Host Lions of Pomona American beat Gray's Paint of Pomona National 6-3, the Elks of National bested the Northwest A's 8-5 and the Breakfast Lions of Ted Greene were awarded a 7-0 forfeit victory over Pomona First Federal when PFF could not field a nine-man team by game-time.

In the Southwest A's victory, Coronado and Hiner had dueled through seven scoreless innings, but singles by Robert Vincent and Nate Harris got the A's going in the top of the eighth. Vincent scored the first run of the contest as hurler Hiner committed a throwing error, and Harris scored later in the frame on a passed ball.

The only other hit in the game for either team was a second-inning single by the A's David Valdez. Hiner finished with nine strikeouts of his own.

In the other contest in the winners bracket at Ralph Welch Tuesday night, Host Lions' pitcher Bill Eldridge limited Gray's to only four hits in posting the win.

Eldridge fanned nine and walked two, Rusty Bryant's double setting up the lone Gray's scores in the fourth inning.

David Clark had a two-run double for the Lions, while teammate Eldridge, Guy Ryan and Richard Davis chipped in with two singles apiece.

The Elks eliminated the Northwest A's from the competition by virtue of a big five-run fourth inning and an outstanding relief job by hurler Mark Alba, who pitched scoreless, hitless ball over the final three frames in relief of starter Ron Lawson.

Northwest hurler Floyd Williams allowed only five hits, but dished out 11 walks which proved to be his undoing. Mike Johnson paced the Elks' offense with two hits and three runs batted in.

The City tourney will continue with two games this evening, both in the losers bracket. Tourney finals are set for Monday, August 9 at Ralph Welch.

D.B. girls make finals

Diamond Bar has advanced to the finals in the major division but all local squads have been eliminated from senior division play as competition unfolds in the Sixth Annual Montclair Golden Girls Softball Tournament at Kingsley Field.

Diamond Bar downed Walnut 18-10 Tuesday to reach the major finals. Other major results saw Upland oust Riverside Catholic by a 26-5 score and Corona elinate host Montclair by a 7-3 score.

In the lone senior contest played Tuesday night, Corona bested Upland 9-3 to send the Upland girls home.

Games tonight have Glendora meeting Norco in a senior outing at 8 p.m., Walnut squaring off against Corona in a major game at 6 p.m. Glendora vs. Upland in the minors at 6 p.m. and Walnut vs. Ontario, also in the minor division, at 8 p.m.

Tourney finals are set for Saturday night at the Kingsley Field diamonds.

Shakey's routed the Optimist Club (the Pomona American runnerup squad) 20-0 in a tourney contest played at the Pomona American LL diamond.

Hurler Anthony Mejia limited the Optimist attack to one lone hit, a single by Dino Molles in the fourth inning. Mejia fanned five and walked home in the contest, which was called after four innings due to the lopsided score.

Elray Burke led the Shakey's offense against three different Optimist pitchers. Burke slugged a single and two doubles good for five runs batted in. He also scored three runs.

The City LL Tourney continues tonight with Lucky Star Market meeting the Northwest Pirates. Another game is slated for Thursday and two on Saturday in the single-elimination competition.

Finals are set for Wednesday, August 11 at the American field when the City LL champions will be crowned. Last year's City champs, Park Avenue Hospital, did not make the tourney field.

LOS ANGELES — At least seven players who have attended valley colleges will take part in the second annual Alumni Basketball Tournament at Crenshaw High Friday and Saturday.

Alumni of six Los Angeles high schools — Crenshaw, Compton, Freemont, Jefferson, Jordon and Manual Arts — will compete in the two-day tourney.

Pomona High basketball coach Curtis Donaldson and Ronnie Byrd, both Cal Poly Pomona graduates, and Ed Taylor and Belvis Pinkney of La Verne College will be among the players for the Jordan Alumni.

Lou Davis and Dennis Love of Cal Poly will play for Fremont and Tom Campbell of La Verne College will play for Compton along with New Orleans Jazz guard Louis Nelson, a Pomona resident.

Other National Basketball Association players involved in the tourney include Glen McDonald of the Boston Celtics and Ron Riley of the Houston Rockets.

Friday's pairings send Compton against Crenshaw at 7 p.m. and Manual Arts against Jordan at 8:30 p.m. Admission is free, but donations will be accepted.

Sports briefs

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Cotton Fitzsimmons, former head coach of the Phoenix Suns and the Atlanta Hawks of the National Basketball Association, has been named director of player personnel for the Golden State Warriors.

Fitzsimmons will be in charge of scouting and will serve as dviser on player personnel matters, Warriors coach and general manager Al Attles said Tuesday.

Starting in 1971, Fitzsimmons spent four years with the Hawks after two years at the helm of the Suns. He compiled a record of 258-78 in 11 years of college coaching.

NEW YORK (AP) — Ben Crenshaw became the first golfer on the 1976 Professional Golfers Association tour to pass the $200,000 mark when he was runnerup to Buddy Allin at last week's Pleasant Valley Classic.

Crenshaw's second-place finish, worth $22,800, boosted his money winnings to $213,201. Hubert Green is second on the PGA list with $188,979, just $977 ahead of Hale Irwin. Al Geiberger, with $162,759 and Jack Nicklaus, $152,019, complete the top five.

Following Nicklaus are U.S. and Canadian Open champion Jerry Pate, $128,482; J.C. Snead, $121,949; Don January, $119,380; Mark Hayes, $118,874, and Roger Maltbie, $115,946.

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Reds catcher Johnny Bench has filed for divorce, nearly five months after he announced his separation from model Vickie Chesser.

In the action filed Monday in Hamilton County Common Pleas Court, Bench charged his wife with "gross neglect of duty."

The Benches were married Feb. 21, 1975, in an elaborate ceremony attended by 800. It followed a whirlwind courtship which received nationwide attention.

NORTH CONWAY, N.H. — Number-three seeded Authur Ashe was eliminated from the $100,000 International Tennis Tournament in straight sets by Zeljko Franulovic of Yugoslavia 6-4, 6-4.

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Patricio Cornejo of Chile scored a mild upset in the $85,500 Buckeye Tennis Championship when he ousted sixth-seeded Sherwood Stewart of Baytown, Tex., 6-2, 6-2.

Ferro may steal show

Auto racing

RIVERSIDE — The names of Parnelli Jones and Mickey Thompson appear first on the marquee, but the real super star of the 4th annual SCORE World Championships of Off-Road Racing August 22 at Riverside International Raceway may turn out to be Bobby Ferro.

The Sherman Oaks movie stunt driver will be going after the only major off-road racing victory that has eluded him, as well as his fourth straight win this season.

Ferro, the intense young scrapper who was "discovered" by actor James Garner and sent to race driving school, will drive a Sandmaster Hustler dune buggy on the 2.5-mile obstacle course against none other than Jones and Thompson plus at least half a hundred other drivers of single-seat dune buggies.

Nobody could have predicted last November that Ferro would be on a winning streak at this time, because then he was lying near death in a hospital, the result of a skiing accident. It was feared that if he lived his racing career would be over.

ONTARIO WILL HOST the area's major tennis action this weekend, with some 100 entrants set to play in the city-sponsored tournament for adults and juniors from the West End, Claremont and Pomona. Officials hope to have most of the adult events down to the semi-finals stage at the end of this first Saturday and Sunday of competition at Chaffey High. There are three ability level classifications — A, B and novice — and each is expected to include a full agenda of men's and women's singles, doubles and mixed doubles.

The youngsters, divisioned off into four age levels, will start playing their pro set matches Aug. 12. Both the adults and juniors will wind up the competition the Aug. 14-15 weekend.

THE GLENDORA TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIPS have always pulled in top talent, some from far beyond California, but this year their regional, national and international lure was greater than ever.

Tournament director Paul Baiotto said 1,500 players have entered the various events in the 15th annual tournament scheduled to run Aug. 14-22. That's 300 more than last year and the entrants will be coming from as far away as New York, New Jersey, Florida and Mexico.

Mexico will supply some particularly prominent players, including Jesus Ceros, its No. 1 ranking 16-and-under boy, and Ileana Zarate, top in the girls 16-and-under division — along with other Junior Davis Cup players, all 14 to 18.

Jeff Jones of Santa Ana and Paul Bernstein of Fullerton, both nationally ranked juniors, will perform in both adult and 18-and-under events.

The Glendora program will include C as well as open competition for the adults, plus five open junior divisions and a novice junior category. Matches will be played at Glendora High and Citurs College.

* * *

MEMBER-GUEST TOURNEY winners at Valley Racquet Club recently were Jack Newman and John Steritz in men's doubles and Lou Wright and Ann Baker in the mixed. Second place duos were Ron Baquet and Mike Woo in men's and Barbara Boldig and L. Olson in mixed.

* * *

THE MAN WHO WINS the San Jose Hills Racquet Club's next tournament will have to be sharp in both singles and doubles. The "men only" event at Mt. San Antonio College Aug. 15 will work this way: 30 players will scatter to six courts and hustle through a "Kinsey round robin" series within their groups — that is, switching both partners and opponents for each match. The championship of each court goes to the player with the best record and the six champs then plunge into a singles play-off to determine the over-all winner.

Club members only are eligible. It's going to be a long day for the final survivors, 8 a.m. to 3 p.m.

* * *

CITRUS COLLEGE has scheduled a summer tennis clinic for Aug. 30-Sept. 3. Mike Meissenburg, Citrus coach and Valley Racquet Club pro, will direct the 15 hours of instruction for beginners, intermediates and competitive players, aided by six assistants and a videotape unit that will expose the harsh realities.

It'll be an evening affair, running from 6 to 9 p.m. each of the five days, and only the first 32 registrants get in the class. Meissenburg says he'll cover basic strokes, drills and exercises to improve skills, strategy, match analysis, equipment selection and care and rules and etiquette. Players can sign up and pay their $30 fee at the college Cashier's Office in the Administration Building.

THE CLAREMONT TENNIS CLUB is pumping new life into its men's singles ladder. New rankings have been posted, based on the club's A, B and C championships last May when Rick Roper earned his spot at the top of the list. The job of trying to keep things active has been entrusted to Paul Schoenlaub as ladder chairman. Ladder players will tumble off if they fail to compete in a challenge match every three weeks . . . A bus trip to a Los Angeles Strings-San Diego Friars match at the Forum is in store for some members of the Valley Racquet Club Aug. 15 . . . The UCLA-USC tennis rivalry will take a recess Sept. 20-23 when a group of eight U.S. collegiat players squares off against Japanese counterparts in Tokyo. UCLA Coach Glenn Bassett will head the visiting team while USC will be represented by three players — women's national intercollegiate champ Barbara Hallquist, Bruce Manson and Chris Lewis — more than any other school . . . The Wightman Cup once was invariably a summer event, invariably contested outdoors. No more. The old traditions went out the window because the women's big money tennis calendar got so crowded that, in 1974, the venerable rivalry between the U.S. and British women was shunted to autumn and scheduled indoors. This year's cup competition is set for Nov. 11-13 at London's Crystal Palace. The Britons have a two-year winning streak . . . San Diego County recreation officials have come up with a pay tennis system that seems a cinch to collect from those who play. Either you pay up or you don't get a net. The system is operating at eight courts in La Mesa, where a player drops two quarters in a meter to raise the net. When time runs out, the net falls to the ground.

Walker claims he's faster now

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — After taking the Olympic gold medal in the 1,500-meter race, rangy, long-maned John Walker of New Zealand announced he was "two seconds better ... than last year" when he broke the world mile record in Sweden with a clocking of 3:49.4.

Walker gets a chance to make good his boast tonight when he steps onto the new all-weather track at the University of Pennsylvania's Franklin Field to stave off the efforts of four sub-3:54 milers.

The Bicentennial Meet of Champions runs through 11 events.

Among those competing against Walker will be West German Olympians Tom Wessinghage and Paul Heinz Wellman, who won the 1,500 bronze; Eamonn Couglan, who ran fourth in the Olympic race; Marty Liquori, recovered from the hamstring pull that kept him off the Montreal team, and fellow New Zealander Rod Dixon.

Not testing Walker will be Filbert Bayi of Tanzania, who held the record until the Swedish meet. Tanzanian officials say Bayi cannot run in any race with Walker because New Zealand sent a sports team to South Africa, the same reason why the two men did not meet at the Olympics.

But there will be plenty of Olympic personalities on hand for fans suffering from post-Montreal letdown.

Hasely Crawford of Trinidad, the gold medalist in the 100 meters, will have to protect his title of world's fastest human against Steve Williams, recovered from a pulled hamstring that kept him off the U.S. team despite his world record of 9.9 seconds.

"It was a nightmare," Williams said of the injury, which occurred at the U.S. Olympic Trials in Eugene, Ore.

"Hasely Crawford never beat me in his life, even on my worst days. He's the world's fastest human? Well, we'll see if he defends it as often as he should."

Lasse Viren, the Finnish policeman who won both the 5,000 and 10,000 gold in Munich and Montreal, will be up against Dick Quax of New Zealand.

Viren nipped Quax by four-tenths of a second in the Olympic 5,000.

Termites invade Pirates' 'Lumber Yard'

By Associated Press

Four runs in the last 38 innings, four losses in the last five games for the Pittsburgh Pirates. It seems there are termites in the Lumber Yard.

That's what people were calling the Pirates earlier in the season, when the power-laden lineup was hitting baseballs out of sight and first place wasn't 13 games away. But in the last eight games, three of which have gone extra innings, just 17 Pittsburgh runs have crossed in 83 innings.

Tuesday night, Don Kessinger of St. Louis drove in more runs than the Pirates could manage in their doubleheader, though Pittsburgh managed to beat the Cardinals 2-1 in the opener before dropping the nightcap 4-2.

Pittsburgh's opening-game triumph went to Jim Rooker, who pitched a six-hitter and drove in a seventh-inning run with a sacrifice fly.

With a runner on third base and one out in a scoreless game, other managers might have lifted Rooker for a pinchhitter in hopes of getting the run home. But the way Pittsburgh bats have been flailing and failing lately, Manager Danny Murtaugh let Rooker swing away.

"I had no idea of hitting for him because I knew he could make contact with the ball and probably get the run in," said Murtaugh. "I'm not that bad a hitter," added Rooker, who entered the game batting .238. "I can usually make contact."

But it's usually the Al Olivers and Willie Stargells who drive the runs in. Pirates batting coach Bob Skinner knows all about it.

"I don't think we've been pressing in the last few games because of our precarious position in the Eastern Division race," said Skinner. "It is more a case of Al Oliver—who had been leading the league in hitting—and Frank Taveras, who had been on a hot streak, cooling down," said Skinner.

Reds 9, Giants 0

Jack Billingham held San Francisco to three hits and Dave Concepcion drove in three runs as the Reds—winners of 17 in 22 since the all-star break— blasted the Giants for their seventh consecutive triumph.

Cubs 4-5, Phillies 0-8

A grand slam homer by Garry Maddox powered Philadelphia past Chicago in the nightcap after the Cubs backed Rick Reuschel's nine-hitter with home runs by rookie Wayne Tyrone and Jrry Morales in the opener.

Braves 7, Padres 3

Atlanta's Clarence Gaston, who had started only two games previously this season, hit two home runs and drove in five in support of Andy Messersmith. "Sometimes I get a little upset about not playing," said Gaston. "When I do, I take extra batting practice and take it out on the ball." Tuesday night, he took his frustation out on San Diego.

Mets 9, Expos 8

Ed Kranepool's 100th career home run, a two-run shot in the eighth inning, lifted the New York over Montreal. The Expos had scored six runs in the seventh and eighth innings to take an 8-7 lead in the wild contest.

West Europe losing its battle with inflation?

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — It is still too early to state conclusively that Western Europe has lost its latest battle with inflation, and probably too despairing also, but the numbers look very bad.

Consumer prices rose at about a 12 per cent annual rate in the first quarter of the year, or about double the rate in the United States. Moreover, the trend was to more inflation.

In the latter half of 1975, for example, the inflation rate averaged out to about 9.5 per cent, a sharp decline from a 16 per cent rate in the first half of the year. But now it is rising again.

Disturbed about the current 6 per cent consumer price inflation, Americans would be shocked by the rates in some European nations. Italy and Spain have rates of more than 20 per cent, and Britain, Holland and France have rates in the area of 14 to 15 per cent.

Only Germany, Switzerland and Belgium, among the major economics, have been able to maintain inflation in the single digits or, in the case of Switzerland, less than that. The Swiss actually have had deflation.

In a commentary on the situation, Merrill Lynch Economics Inc. observes that some European governments "seem unable or unwilling to move seriously enough against inflation."

Instead, it said, "they seem to be more concerned with the short-run political and social consequences of unemployment than they are with the slightly longer term and more serious political, social and economic consequences of inflation."

The criticisms made by Arnold Simkin, the Merrill Lynch senior economist based in London, seem remarkably similar to those charges levied against the American government in the past, sometimes by European nations.

"Most Europeans," writes Simkin, "seem to be unwilling to bite the bullet on economic matters." Various wage escalators are built into the economies of Most European countries, "enshrined" as Simkin puts it.

Therefore, a typical reaction to inflation, he says, has been to try to introduce wage and-or price controls "Needless to say, these have not been successful."

In those instances in which governments have succeeded in suppressing price increase by decree, he observes, "the result has been that corporate profits have suffered, and business' ability to invest has been impaired..."

There is a villain in this scenario, and many Americans will recognize it as the very one responsible for domestic inflation. The villain, says Simkin, is public-sector deficit spending."

Europe thus is attempting to maintain a recovery while at the same time bucking inflation. "Something may have to give," the Merrill Lynch analysis concludes, "and current levels of inflation lower the odds on a long, healthy economic expansion for Europe as a whole."

Looking even further into the distance, Chase Manhattan sees another flaw in the European recovery, the fact that an increasing proportion of new plant and equipment spending is aimed at saving energy and labor than expanding production.

"This trend has adverse implications for Europe's medium-term growth potential," the Chase economists say.

Business briefs

NEW YORK (AP) — Last Friday's buying enthusiasm did not carry over the weekend and stock prices sagged Monday in dull trading.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks dipped 2.38 to 982.26 as stock sales slowed to less than 14 million shares.

Normally stimulative cuts in bank prime lending rates failed to spark the market because Wall Street expected the rate declines. And news from Washington that factory orders in June were little changed from May underscored the market's malaise.

UPPER SADDLE RIVER, N.J. (AP) — Western Union announced plans to introduce a new mass message service designed for the small business market.

The new system, called "Stored Mailgram," will enable businesses to store standard letters and addresses in a Western Union computer which will mass produce mailgrams and send them to the multiple addresses.

Jointly operated by Western Union and the U.S. Postal Service, the mailgram network electronically routes messages to local post offices for mail delivery the next business day.

The new system will enable businesses to send Mailgram messages from stored lists for about $1.20 each, company officials said.

SEATTLE (AP) — The Boeing Co., largest aerospace firm in the nation, has reported higher earnings for the second quarter of the year.

Chairman T. A. Wilson said that earnings rose to $27.1 million or $1.27 a share from $20 million or 94 cents a share in the second quarter of 1975. Sales were $1.17 billion compared to $1.04 billion during the same period last year, he added.

He attributed the gains to increased sales of commercial jets, lower interest rates and reduced debt expenses.

During the first half of the year, Boeing delivered 70 jetliners, Wilson said.

Separately, American Airlines said it will buy six 727 200 long bodied jets from the Boeing Commercial Airplane Co. for $67 million.

Airlines chairman and president Albert Casey said the 727s will replace older aircraft that are less fuel effecient and noisier.

At Scout campsite

Engineers give help

Members of the 282nd Engineering Company, Water Supply Division of the 63rd U.S. Army Reserve Command based in San Diego, became honorary Girl Scouts during the last two weeks while completing an engineering project at Spanish Trails Girl Scout Council's camp site located on Palomar Mountain in San Diego County.

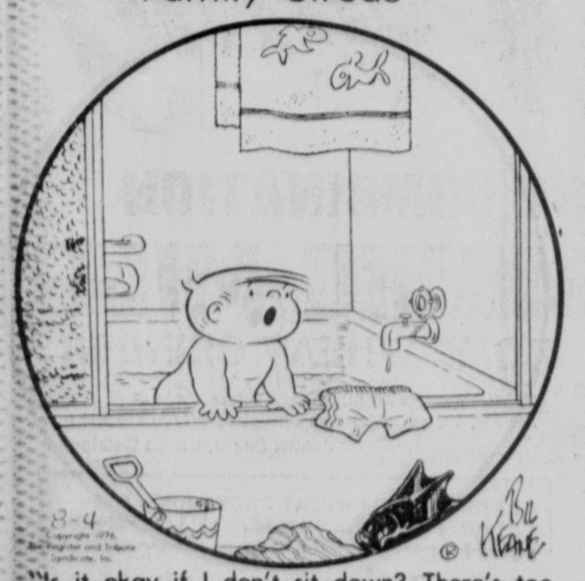

Cooperative efforts on behalf of the Spanish Trails Council, which serves 20,000 girls in the eastern portion of Los Angeles County and the western portion of San Bernardino County began in the fall of 1975 when the council contacted the Army Reserve Command relative to operational needs prior to the 1976 camp season. Assistance is given by the Reserve group in designing, engineering and developing the camp's total water system.

The 282nd Engineering Company, under the direction of Captain Berle Maxey, made several weekend trips and now the two-week tour of duty in order to test the water for clarity, palatability, odor and to minimize the alkalinity and high iron content.

Plans have been made for the summer of 1977 when the 282nd hopes to set up a summer long water purification program for the campsite.

Another San Diego Army Reserve Unit, the 359th Engineer Detachment, Terrain Analysis, will spend time on the campsite in the near future exploring the feasibility of designing a small dam to create an artificial lake for swimming and boating.

Try complaining

If restroom facilities in public places are not clean, complain! Dirt, broken equipment and a lack of soap, towels or tissue are not only unpleasant, but unsanitary and can be a health hazard.

Travelers checks: a multimillion dollar business

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar bill signed by the U.S. treasurer and the secretary of the Treasury is supposed to be a symbol of strength. But thousands of tourists line up each year to buy currency secured only by their own signatures and a bank's reputation.

The currency is travelers checks and the banks and corporations who issue them proclaim that their money is safer than the government's.

American Express Co. urges travelers not to leave home without theirs. Citibank says their checks are more convenient and secure than Uncle Sam's dollars. And Britain's Barclays Bank will exchange their checks for your dollars at no fee.

Travelers checks were devised in 1891 by Marcellus Berry for American Express as a replacement for awkward letters of credit, statements saying how much money a traveler can draw on a bank.

Since then, the checks have become a multibillion dollar business, risky enough to discourage all but a few tough competitors and very profitable for those issuers who can develop a large clientele.

Commonly quoted industry figures place worldwide sales at $12 billion to $15 billion a year and the industry has maintained a 12 to 15 per cent annual growth rate despite the recent recession.

The largest issuer of all is American Express, which last year alone sold about $6 billion worth of travelers checks. Amex outsells Bank of America and Citibank — its two biggest U.S. competitors — by two to one and also holds a commanding lead over foreign competitors, mostly international banks in Britain, Canada, Australia and Japan.

The issuers themselves are close-mouthed on their travelers check operations, not unusual where products are almost identical and companies must persuade customers through advertising and marketing schemes.

Agents who sell the checks, including the issuers themselves and other banks which do not offer their own travelers checks, usually charge a 1 per cent commission. In Barclay's case, there is no commission at all.

But even when travelers pay for their checks, the commission is too small to cover the heavy costs of printing, promoting, handling, loss and theft, which is substantial.

Where issuers like American Express make money is on the interest-free use of billions of tourist dollars, available until the checks are cashed and redeemed by the issuer.

Six to eight weeks usually go by between issuing and cashing, one British issuer says, but the period can be longer if checks are cashed abroad.

Once signed, the checks sometimes are used like money, passing through a dozen hands before they get back to their issuer. The period can be stretched even further, to the issuers' advantage.

American Express urges holders to "keep unused checks as emergency money or for future trips," and Citibank, knowing that people usually take summer trips in July or August, sells up to $5,000 in checks in May for $2 intead of the usual 1 per cent commission.

Another financial break enjoyed by New York-based American Express and Citibank is the generous terms allowed travelers check issuers under state abandoned property laws.

Issuers may hold the money for uncashed checks for 15 years before turning it over to the state. By comparison, banks must surrender inactive accounts after five years and corporations such as insurance companies must give up unclaimed property after three years.

Last year, American Express turned over to New York State $1.4 million for uncashed checks it sold 15 years ago.

Issuers complaining about their affluent image say the risks they must take are large.

"It is a low margin business and you've got to sell a lot of checks before you make any money at it. The losses from incidents like theft and counterfeiting are really quite substantial," protested one company employe.

He was unable to document his claim because, like others, his company does not discuss details of its travelers check operations. But a slow, steady decline in the number of world-wide issuers points to some of the pitfalls of the business.

A few years ago, an Australian bank shut down its travelers check operations in British sterling after losing millions to European counterfeiters.

With no fanfare, the Bank of Montreal quietly closed down its travelers check operations a few years ago.

"There really was no formal explanation. The decision was made by the people in Montreal but obviously, they did not make enough money at it," one banker said.

Prison drug flaws cited in audit

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — A federal audit today showed flaws in State Prison records on thousands of doses of prescription drugs—but no sign that any drugs were actually missing.

"The audit by the Drug Enforcement Administration was ordered after a state Division of Investigations and Narcotics audit showed doses of pain killers, stimulants and tranquilizers were missing.

Former Warden Ed Pogue, who resigned Friday, had challenged the initial state audit and the state Prison Board then sought the DEA audit.

New Warden Charles Wolff Jr. said the latest audit showed that there was "good control" of drugs because no drugs were missing.

But Gov. Mike O'Callaghan, chairman of the Prison Board, said the second audit showed that there had been no formal accounting for returned drugs not used by inmates who held valid prescriptions.

The result was the DEA Audit showed more sales of drugs than the actual amount of drugs available, because some of the returned drugs were resold to other inmates.

The DEA, in its following audit, recommended that the prison update its drug record-keeping system and make improvements in security to prevent any drug thefts.

Warden Wolff said the recommended changes will be made.

Dog on trial for viciousness bites attorney

ROCKLAND, Maine (AP) — A dog on trial for viciousness provided its own most damaging testimony — it bit an assistant district attorney in the ankle.

Two dozen persons had gone to the court to complain about the dog. District Court Judge Paul A. MacDonald, trying to keep order in the crowded court, continued the case and asked the district attorney's office to interview witnesses in a separate room.

During the interviews, the dog caught Asst. Dist. Atty. Paul Eggert walking across the room and bit him.

MacDonald, saying no further evidence was needed, ordered the dog's owner, Emily Robbins of Rockland, to chain the dog.

Poison cloud hovers

Evacuation seen for Italy town

SEVESO, Italy (AP) — Officials said today that they may evacuate more persons because of pollution from a poison cloud that escaped more than three weeks ago from a chemical plant near this north Italian village.

Authorities said light deposits of fallout have been found in some areas near the villages of Desio and Cesano Maderno, south of the Icmesa chemical plant.

"We do not plan more mass evacuations as pollution is light in such areas," a health official said. "However, we might decide to send about 100 children and pregnant women away as a precaution."

A heavily polluted area of 250 acres has been fenced off, and the 620 men, women and children living there have been evacuated. Some experts said it might be several months or even years before they could return.

As a precaution, about 200 Seveso children were sent to vacation resorts.

An explosion in the Swiss-owned plant released a cloud of highly toxic TCDD (tetrachlorodibenzodioxin), a chemical used in some defoliants. Thirty-five persons have been hospitalized for poisoning or skin infections; hundreds of birds and animals died; vegetables and foliage withered, and health officials warned that the residue could have harmful effects on those who come in contact with it.

Several pregnant women from the worst infected zone reported to a special medical center today to discuss whether to seek therapeutic abortions.

Giorgio Carreri, an official of the Milan Health Institute, said if a medical commission decides a fetus is endangered, the woman could get an abortion without any difficulty. He pointed out that the present Italian law allows therapeutic abortion, and there is nothing unusual about it.

Abortion on demand is still forbidden despite a strong movement in favor of it.

A doctor at the special center said at least 10 women want abortions.

"Others expressed the hope of keeping their babies provided examinations prove the fetus did not suffer any damage," he said.

He added that such pollution was especially dangerous within the first three months of pregnancy.

The government decided to allocate funds for the most urgent needs of the evacuees and for some aid to the industrial, commercial and agricultural activities affected by the pollution. It was estimated that about 1,000 workers lost their jobs as the result of firms being closed and several large farms being evacuated.

Air bags considered for all new cars

Should U.S. protect drivers?

WASHINGTON (AP) — How far should the government go to protect motorists who refuse to protect themselves?

That is a key question to be resolved by Transportation Secretary William T. Coleman Jr. as he opened hearings Tuesday on proposals to require installation of air bags in new cars.

Coleman has promised to decide before the end of the year whether the government will require that air bags be built into new cars.

Currently, the government requires auto makers to provide seat and lap belts, so-called passive restraints such as air bags, which require no driver initiative, or a combination of the two. Almost all auto makers offer the seat and lap belts, but General Motors has sold about 6,000 luxury cars with optional air bags in the past two years.

Coleman previously said he could decide to continue the present law while testing air bags or other versions of passive restraint systems or while requiring states to pass laws requiring use of seat belts. Or, he said, he could change the law to require all new cars have air bags or some other passive restraint system, or to require auto makers to offer passive restraint systems on some new car models.

Coleman acknowledged in announcing the public hearing that he not only must wrestle with problems of cost, effectiveness and possible hazards of passive restraints, but with the philosophical question of how far the government should go in protecting the public.

Air bags automatically inflate when sensors on the front of the car signal a crash is occurring. A small explosive charge pushes the bag out of the dash or steering wheel and inflates it, providing a pillow to catch occupants and keep them from flying into the windshield. The bags inflate in less than one twenty-fifth of a second.

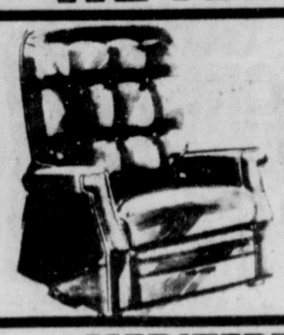

Proponents of air bags, including most insurance companies, say air bags are needed because motorists will not use the seat belts already in their cars. The government says only about one-third of all drivers use seat belts. Mandatory seat belt laws would increase this figure, proponents say, but would never be as effective as air bags.

Opponents, including auto makers, say bags are unreliable and expensive.

'Biggest' films stress fear; cannibalism in 'Survive' next

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The basic element in blockbuster movies seems to be fear — of sharks, earthquakes, burning buildings, the Mafia, falling aircraft, upturned ocean liners, the devil. Paramount Pictures now hopes cannibalism will join the list.

This month Paramount is mounting a blanket release of "Survive!" a Mexican-made movie based on the 1972 Andean air crash in which 16 athletes saved their lives by eating the flesh of their dead companions.

"Survive!" is not to be confused with "Alive!" but certainly will be. The latter was the official version of the tragedy, a best-seller which was purchased two years ago by United Artists. At least two scripts have been written.

"At present we are reviewing the situation," says Mike Medavoy, United Artists' west coast production chief. "We have a director, John Schlesinger, but we do not have a script."

Meanwhile Paramount is pushing ahead with its version, the result of bold action by 36-year-old Allan Carr, film and TV producer as well as manager of such stars as Ann-Margret, Nancy Walker, Marvin Hamlisch, Sonny Bono and Won Ton Ton.

"It all started last Christmas when I was vacationing in Acapulco," said Carr. "I happened to be reading a Mexico City newspaper and I noticed that a movie named 'Survivors of the Andes' was scheduled for a one-day run to qualify for the Mexican equivalent of the Academy awards. It looked to me like a rip-off of the book 'Alive!.'"

Carr learned that the Mexican film, directed by veteran Rene Cardona Sr., had been based on a book by Clay Blair Jr., Saturday Evening Post editor, author of many books including "The Search for J.F.K." He had researched his book in Uruguay and Chile; it was published in the United States by Berkley Medallion books and was overshadowed by "Alive!"

"I went to Mexico City on Jan. 18, when 'Survivors of the Andes' was playing in six theaters," said Carr. "There were lines around the block. The picture was bigger in Mexico than 'The Sting.'"

He saw possibilities in the film, then at a length of two hours and 10 minutes. He called his partner, Robert Stigwood, the London-based producer of "Jesus Christ Superstar" and "Tommy." The pair acquired releasing rights outside of Spanish-speaking countries.

"Now we faced the problem: how can we Americanize the movie for release in this country?" said Carr "The answer was to give it a complete face-lift. That could be only done in Hollywood, which still has the greatest technicians in the world."

And so the wizards took over, stripping the Mexican version of its sound, slicing the footage to 87 minutes, bleaching the stock so scenes would match, fashioning new titles, adding new sound effects and English dialogue, re-scoring with a 50-piece orchestra.

BIG BAND MAN — Freddy Martin, saxophonist, and his orchestra will play music from the big band era at Disneyland Sunday through Aug. 14 at the Main Street Plaza Gardens.

Martin to perform at Disneyland

Disneyland continues its summer entertainment program next week with big bands, pop performers, fireworks and Bicentennial parades.

Freddy Martin and his orchestra will entertain at the Main Street's Plaza Gardens Sunday through Aug. 14 with tunes from the big band era. They will offer music for dancing and listening from 8:15 p.m. to 12:30 a.m.

Recording group Bloodstone will perform on stage near Fantasyland's "It's A Small World" attraction Sunday through Aug. 13 at 9:15 and 11:15 p.m. Dorothy Moore will also sing on the show and spotlight her current hit "Misty Blue."

A special Bicentennial edition of the park's "Fantasy in the Sky" fireworks will illuminate the sky above the Sleeping Beauty Castle each night at 9. The All-American College Singers and All-American College Marching Band will continue day and night performances for Disneyland guests. "America on Parade" goes daily at 3 and 10 p.m.

The park is open from 8 a.m. to 1 a.m. during the summer.

It's a high-flying show; 'George M' to appear

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "It's a grand old flag, it's a highflying flag ..."

The George M. Cohan anthem to patriotism, much heard in this red, white and blue summer, will be sung again Wednesday, Aug. 4 when CBS presents a repeat of the musical special, "George M!" starring Joel Grey. This will be a different version from the portrayal by James Cagney in the 1942 film, "Yankee Doodle, Dandy."

"I saw 'Yankee Doodle Dandy' on the Fourth of July," said Grey. "It's a great picture, but it's an innocent, sugar-coated Warner Brothers musical. There is no indication about the price a man pays to become a star. Judging from the movie, you'd never know that Cohan had children, that he was divorced.

"The Cagney film was such a classic that I naturally hesitated to portray Cohan. I did it because I thought I could add another dimension, to show what happens to a man when ambition takes over his life."

Joel Grey left his own classic role, the macabre emcee in "Cabaret," in 1968 to star at the Palace Theater in "George M." The show lasted a year in New York, and Grey played it for six months on the road, including Los Angeles and San Francisco.

"It was a hit," he said, "surprisingly so, because it came at a time when patriotism was in disrepute. In fact, when (then President) Nixon came to the show and praised it, we almost closed."

The television version first appeared on NBC in September, 1970, in a 90-minute form. The CBS special will air at one hour, and Grey believes it will play better that way.

Aside from the fact that they have been superior entertainers who spent their lives before audiences, there is little similarity between Joel Grey and George M. Cohan. Joel has been married to the same wife for 28 years, and although he is a dedicated performer, he does not seem obsessed by his career.

"Other priorities are more prominent in my life, particularly family and friends," he observed.

His sense of proportion may be due to the fact that success came late. Son of the Yiddish entertainer-musician Mickey Katz, Joel started performing at age 10. He appeared in the film "About Face" at 19 and was offered a Warner Brothers contract. His agent advised against it.

He was operated on three days earlier to reconstruct ligaments in his right ankle. He'll be on crutches 10 days, followed by eight weeks with a walking cast.

Cliff Richard attempts to crack U.S. records

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "I'm Nearly Famous," proclaims the title of Cliff Richard's latest record album. Quite so.

At 35, Richard has been a major talent in England and Europe for 18 years. As a pop music singer he has produced more than 60 hit songs. He alo has starred in movies and acted in plays. He has had his own television series.

Yet he is virtually unknown in the United States.

For all his success in other parts of the world, Cliff Richard has never been able to crack the U.S. market. His only hit song was "Liv-in' Doll," which hit No. 30 on the national sales charts in the winter of 1959.

Now he is making a determined effort to change all that. His album is out on Rocket Records, the label owned by fellow Briton Elton John, and a single, "Devil Woman," is climbing the song charts. Richard recently blitzed through the country on a 12-day binge to promote the records and feel out a possible peforming tour.

"I'm excited about it," Richard confessed when he got to Los Angeles. "If people like the music I'll come over and do concerts. I'm not so ambitious to be an actor anymore; what I want is to be a pop singer."

That's what he was in the beginning, of course, and he did do a concert tour in January 1960, including an appearance on "The Ed Sullivan Show."

But as Richard tells it now, the United States already was wrapped up in the music of Elvis Presley, Ricky Nelson, Frankie Avalon, Fabian and other American singers. The Englishman got lost in the shuffle.

Neville's art work on display

The Associated Artists will enjoy the artistry of Diana Neville, portrait artist, at their Aug. 11 meeting at 9:30 a.m. in the Ontario library.

Miss Neville began her formal art education at the age of 9 and her professional portrait career at 14. After graduating from high school, she was awarded two full tuition scholarships to Art Students League in New York and the Chicago Art Institute. She completed her academic education at Denver's Institute of Art.

Her paintings have been shown in art galleries and collections throughout the nation and she has been commissioned to do portraits for such personalities as Jimmy Durante, Vic Damone, Robert Goulet, Phil Harris, Wayne Newton and Lee Trevino.

FAMILY COMEDY — David Gassner as Dexter Franklin and Oatha Feffer as Corliss Archer are shown in a scene from the family comedy "Kiss and Tell," running now at the Claremont Playhouse at Griswold's. The comedy will close in two more weeks. Curtain time is Thursday through Saturday nights at 8:30.

Farbman to conduct Redlands Symphony

Harry Farbman will conduct the Redlands Bowl Symphony in its third appearance this season on Tuesday with Madeline Bruser as piano soloist at 8:15 p.m. in the Redlands Bowl.

Miss Bruser, 1975 winner of the first national Chopin Competition, has appeared as soloist with orchestras throughout the United States, including the Denver Symphony, with Brian Priestman and the San Francisco Symphony under the direction of Arthur Fiedler.

A recent graduate of the Julliard School, she has presented numerous recitals, including chamber music with such artists as cellist Peter Rejto and flutist Andras Adorjan. She has also recorded for radio in the United States, Poland and Holland, and twice won the Alfred Hertz Award for Music.

She will play the Ravel Piano Concerto Tuesday. The symphony will feature the Overture to Der Freischutz by von Weber, Schubert's Unfinished Symphony, the Overture to Der Meistersinger by Richard Wagner and Polovetsian Dances from "Prince Igor" by Borodin.

There is no admission charge, but a free will offering will be accepted.

Mitchell to be host for Festival show

Actor Cameron Mitchell will be host-narrator of the "Festival of Nations," a 90-minute music and dance spectacular celebrating America's heritage, at the Starlight Bowl in Burbank Saturday at 8 p.m.

Motorcycle daredevil Evel Knievel will make a guest appearance with Mitchell. Mitchell will narrate the entire program, including a reading of Aaron Copland's "Lincoln Portrait."

The "Festival of Nations" is a benefit concert for Burbank Performing Arts Federation and the Wonderful World of Youth, a non-profit corporation to train and promote young professional musicians.

Music in the Southland

'Godspell' to play until at least Aug. 14

The Fontana Mummers presentation of the rock musical "Godspell" has been extended to at least Aug. 14 due to standing room audiences during performances.

Performances are Wednesday through Saturday nights at 8:30.

The show is produced by Bill Bittner and is directed by Dennis Michaels of the Fontana Mummers, assisted by Glen Calloway of the Riverside Community Players. Cathy Rowland Gray serves as choreographer of the presentation. Michaels also heads the cast in the role of Jesus.

Marine band to play at Starlite Patio

The Third Marine Aircraft Wing Band from El Toro Marine Base, under the direction of Anthony J. DiGiovanni, will entertain on the final program of the season of the Starlite Patio Theater Tuesday.

The program will be at 8 p.m. in the recreation facility in the Montclair Civic Center.

With a repertoire of music ranging from regimental to rock, the Marine musicians entertain thousands of people every year at appearances throughout the western United States. Included in the band is a 16-piece dance band that offers the big band sound and entertains at military receptions and official functions at the air station.

L.A. Philharmonic to be led by Shaw

Robert Shaw, music director of the Atlanta Symphony, will conduct the Los Angeles Philharmonic and a USC chorale in two choral masterpieces at the Hollywood Bowl Saturday and Tuesday nights at 8:30.

Verdi's "Requiem" will be performed Saturday and Berlioz's "Requiem — Great Mass for the Dead" will be presented Tuesday. The USC National Workshop Chorale will be featured in both performances.

Auditions for opera to be held on Sunday

Auditions for leading and supporting roles in the West End Opera Association's November performance of "La Boheme" will be held Sunday from 1:30 to 5 p.m. at Vernon Junior High School in Ontario.

The school is located at 9775 Vernon Ave., two blocks east of Central Avenue. A piano accompanist will be present and vocalists are asked to bring their own music. It is preferred that those interested in a major role sing an aria from the opera.

New chorus members and a children's chorus will also be needed. Those wishing additional information may call 982-3149.

Black underground still survives in So. Africa

JOHANNESBURG, So. Africa (AP) — A black underground movement seeking the overthrow of South Africa's white minority government apparently survives despite the vigilance of security police.

Whether the underground is behind recent outbreaks of violence, including last month's rioting in which 176 persons were killed, is unclear.

White authorities claim the disturbances are organized, but have not said whom they think is responsible for the continuing violence in the segregated black townships around Johannesburg and the nearby capital of Pretoria.

Officials say they don't know how large the underground is, or how strong its support among South Africa's 18 million blacks.

It is widely believed the ubiquitous security police have infiltrated most black organizations. Scores of arrests of black militants in recent years seem to underline this ability to keep tabs on both underground organizations and openly antigovernment legal movements.

Few if any white journalists have contact with the "real" black underground, which does not include such legal organizations as the Black People's Convention or the all-black South African Student Organization.

Two weeks ago, 10 blacks appeared in court in Pietermaritzburg on charges of "terroristic activities" and violating anti-Communist laws.

and the Soviet Union.

All 10 are charged with recruiting blacks for guerrilla training abroad, and could face the death penalty if convicted.

The men are allegedly members of the banned African National Congress — ANC — which went underground when the movement was declared illegal in 1960 after police killed 69 blacks protesting pass laws at Sharpeville.

Nelson Mandela, leader of the ANC, has been in prison on Robben Island off Cape Town since 1964, when he and other top ANC official were given life sentences for sabotage and conspiracy to overthrow the government.

Security police say an unknown number of blacks have been smuggled out of the country via Swaziland and Mozambique to Tanzania.

Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere allowed his country to be used as a base for black guerrillas in their successful war against Portuguese rule in Mozambique, and Nyerere now maintains training camps for black nationalists fighting white rule in Rhodesia.

Oliver Tambo, acting ANC president, is based in Tanzania.

ANC officials told an Organization of African Unity — OAU — meeting in Ethiopia earlier this year it was an open secret the movement smuggles black recruits out of South Africa for military training. The ANC said the recruits would be "infiltrated back and spread throughout the country in readiness for action."

"Our struggle will not exclude action in the cities, because of the highly industrialized character of the South Africa situation," one official said.

In South Africa, the ANC runs a secret newsletter and distributes occasional pamphlets, sometimes in leaflet "bombs" that explode at crowded railway stations or outside courts where blacks are on trial.

The black underground is apparently backed by a small, clandestine, white-led movement called Okhela, which recently issued a report on how a U.S. oil company in South Africa allegedly provides white-ruled Rhodesia with fuel despite United Nations sanctions.

Little is known of Okhela, which first surfaced late last year when antiapartheid poet Breyten Breytenbach went on trial under South Africa's terrorism act.

Coral is a hard, rocky material formed in the sea from the limestone skeletons of many tiny sea creatures called coral polyps (pronounced POL ips).

A coral polyp builds its limestone skeleton around its soft body. The limestone is made from chemicals present in sea water.

Only the polyp s mouth and tentacles reach out of the protective skeleton to feed upon the tiny organisms floating in the sea.

Coral polyps spend their lives anchored in one place. Many polyps living together in a colony form a single piece of coral.

There are many kinds of coral. The shape of a coral structure depends on the kind of polyps that form it. Formations may look like branching trees, large domes, or even like tiny organ pipes.

A World Almanac globe or other fine prize will be awarded to the first youngster sending in a question used here. Send your question and your age to Johnny Wonder, (c/o this newspaper), Box 1335 (DA), Santa Cruz, CA 95061.
